SECRETARY OF STATE BRYAN HAS RESIGNED

Not in Accord with President Wilson on the Nation's Attitude Toward Germany, He Offers His Resignation and it is Promptly Accepted by the President.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, June 9.—Secretary of State Bryan resigned late yesterday afternoon and the resignation was at once accepted by President Wilson.

MR. BRYAN'S LETTER OF RESIGNATION.

My Dear Mr. President:—

It is with sincere regret that I have reached the conclusion that I should return to you the commission of Secretary of State with which you honored me at the beginning of your administration.

Obedient to your sense of duty and actuated by the highest motives, you have prepared for transmission to the German government a note in which I cannot join without violating what I deem to be an obligation to my country, and the issue involved is of such moment that to remain a member of the Cabinet would be as unfair to you as it would be to the cause which is nearest my heart, namely, the prevention of war.

I, therefore, respectfully tender my resignation, to take effect when the note is sent, unless you prefer an earlier hour. Alike desirous of reaching a peaceful solution of the problems arising out of the use of submarines against merchantmen, we find ourselves differing irreconcilably as to the methods which should be employed.

It falls to your lot to speak officially for the nation. I consider it to be none the less my duty to endeavor as a private citizen to promote the end which you have in view by means which you do not feel at liberty to use.

In severing the intimate and pleasant relations which have existed between us during the last two years permit me to acknowledge the profound satisfaction which it has given me to be associated with you in the important work which has come before the State Department and to thank you for the courtesies extended.

With the heartiest good wishes for your personal welfare and for the success of your administration, I am, my dear Mr. President,

Very truly,
W. J. BRYAN.

Washington, June, 8, 1915.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S LETTER OF ACCEPTANCE.

My Dear Mr. Bryan:—

I accept your resignation only because you insist upon its acceptance; and I accept it with much more than deep regret, with a feeling of personal sorrow. Our two years of close association have been very delightful to me. Our judgments have accorded in practically every matter of official duty and of public policy until now. Your support of the work and purposes of the administration has been generous and loyal beyond praise, your devotion to the duties of your great office and your eagerness to take advantage of every great opportunity for service it offered have been an example to the rest of us. You have earned our affectionate admiration and friendship. Even now we are not separated in the object we seek, but only in the method by which we seek it.

It is for these reasons my feeling about your retirement from the Secretaryship of State goes so much deeper than regret. I sincerely deplore it. Our objects are the same and we ought to pursue them together. I yielded to your desire only because I must, and wish to bid you Godspeed in the parting. We shall continue to work for the same causes, even when we do not work in the same way.

With affectionate regard, sincerely yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

Secretary of State Bryan's resignation came as a great shock to official and diplomatic Washington and ambassadors, ministers and officials of every rank received the news with amazement.

Rumors of a disagreement in the cabinet over the administration's policy toward Germany had been current, but no one outside of those close to the president had any idea it was serious enough to cause the resignation of the head of the chief executive's official family. Consequently the announcement caused a sensation here that has not been paralleled in recent years.

Diplomats and officials generally expressed regret that the break should have come at this critical period. They interpreted the resignation in bent fashion relative to its affect on the situation now existing between Germany and the U. S., but the consensus seemed to be that it forecasts a determination by the administration to defend the rights of the U. S. in any eventuality.

Secretary Bryan at his home seemed much relieved that the weight of official responsibility had been removed from his shouldrs. He was at work early in the day on a statement which he informed reporters he would issue as soon as the president's rejoinder was dispatched to Berlin today. He said his resignation would become effective when the note was sent.

"The letters made public with the announcement of my resignation state my reasons" he said "but I will have a more complete statement that will be given out when the American reply to the German note is sent."

Mr. Bryan indicated that he has not made any definite plans for the future, but he stated he would remain in Washington for a while.

That this government is to send a strong and pointed rejoinder to the German govenment's reply on the Lusitania tragedy is the outstanding opinion here today in connection with the sensational resignation of William Jennings Bryan, Premier of President Wilson's cabinet.

The resignation of the secretary of state was the absorbing topic of comment in official and diplomatic quarters today and there was a general unanimity of opinion based on the correspondence which passed between the president and secretary of state, that the second Wilson note is to be even stronger than this government's communication of May 13.

The note prepared by the president and revised in certain details as to language by Counsellor Lansing of the state department, was ready to be cabled to Berlin today, according to the plans of the chief executive. The note, however, will be signed by Robert Lansing, acting secretary of state and not by William J. Bryan.

Mr. Bryan resigned because he refused to sign a note of the tenor drawn by the president and made the time for the acceptance of his resignation contingent upon the actual dispatch of a note he could not sanction.

Secretary Brayn himself is authority for the statement that the differences of opinion between himself and the president concern only the German note and no other matters connected with the foreign affairs of this government. The secretary says he had has no disagreement on the Mexican question, but that his views and those of the president on the German reply were so radically different that they were forced to sever official relations.

It also became known today from authoritative sources that the president and his secretary of state began to draw apart on the German question several weeks ago prior to the dispatch of the first note on the Lusitania incident which the secretary of state reluctantly signed. Mr. Bryan admits that the first outcropping of differences came in connection with this government's attitude on the Falaba incident and as other phases of Germany's submarine warfare arose there was a general widening of the breach.

"The differences between the president and myself" said Mr. Byan, "are as to methods to be pursued and not the ends to be gained."

The Bryan resignation confirms forecasts that the second American note is a vigorous document and that it relates in no way to suggestions of arbitration and delay in the German situation, whereas the secretary of state feeling this government, by its peace treaties, is committed to reflection and arbitration, stood for such a policy.

It now is practically certain that that this government in unqualified terms will demand of Germany that the freedom of the seas for neutrals must be respected and that above all things the lives and interests of Americans, on peaceful missions bent, must be protected.

The note also is understood to convey to Germany the impression that this great principle of the freedom of the seas will be backed up by the American people, the most powerful nation not now involved in the European conflict, in any manner which may become necessary.

The effect of the note will be to inform Germany that while the U. S. desires peace and the maintenance of amicable relations with the Kaiser's government, it is useless to parley about non-essentials so long as Germany does not recognize the American position and agree to accept her version of what constitutes legitimate warfare on the water.

An unfavorable reply by Germany, it now appears certain, would pave the way for severing diplomatic relations between the two countries and beyond that any eventuality is regarded by officials as possible.

Bryan's Successor.

The office of secretary of state made vacant by the resignation of William J. Bryan must be filled by President Wilson with a permanent appointment within 30 days.

This is required under the act of February 6, 1891, which provides that "vacancy occasioned by death or resignation must not be filled temporarily for a longer period than thirty days."

The new secretary need not be confirmed by the senate before he takes office as the president is authorized by law to fill all vacancies that may happen during a recess of the senate.

Robert Lansing, counsellor of the state department, now is acting secretary of state and he will continue in this capacity until a permanent secretary shall have been named by the president. The chief executive, it is said, has the counsellor under consideration for the premiership, which would be a fitting tribute to his long service for the U. S.

There is much talk, however, of a coalition cabinet, and there are many followers of the executive who are said to favor wiping out party lines in the present crisis. Republicans who served at Washington in the premiership and other high places are mentioned for the portfolio in the cabinet.

Philander Chase Knox, secretary of state under the last Republican administration, is talked of as a successor for Mr. Bryan, while Elihu Root is suggested as an especially valuable foreign secretary in the present situation. Joseph H. Choate at one time ambassador to London, also is mentioned.

Among the Democrats proposed for consideration, Senator Oscar Underwood, Senator Stone, chairman of the foreign relations committee, and Secretary of War Garrison are prominent.

VAN AKEN JURY VISITS SCENE OF THE CRIME.

The jury in the Van Aken murder trial and the court officers in charge of them lined up in front of Edwin Van Aken's residence in Port Ewen on Monday and were snapped by The Freeman's photographer. The juror in the center, wearing a cap, is Juror Rourke, the man who asks questions. The officer at the right is Deputy Sheriff Murphy, who was shot about two years ago by Franklin O. Van Velson at New Salem. ....

RUNAWAY AUTO THROUGH WINDOW

The automobile of S. Weisberg of North Front street started from in front of the Orpheum theater on Tuesday evening and ran away down the Broadway hill. Mr. Weisberg was attending the performance at the theater and left his car standing. It is thought that some of the gang of toughs who congregate about the house released the brakes and allowed the machine to start. When arriving near the store of Stock & Cordts it took a turn and went through a plate glass front of that store and demolished the glass and some of the wood work. The machine was also damaged. This morning Albert Mauterstock was engaged in placing a new front in the store.

For some time past there has been a number of young rough necks who collect about the theater and make life miserable for everybody who passes. Time and again the police have tried to break up this gang and some have been sent over the road. Another lesson is about due for some of them. Mr. Weisberg is positive that his brakes were set when he left the auto standing in front of the Orpheum.

AN 8,000 MILE TRIP.

Channing P. Clapp to Visit Panama Exposition and Canal.

Channing P. Clapp, son of Sidney K. Clapp, is being congratulated on all sides these days. Next August he is going on an 8,000 mile trip to the Panama Exposition returning through Panana Canal, and here's the best part of it all, he is earning his entire expenses on this great trip as a member of the Panama Canal Club, of which he is a delegate from the Ashokan Boy Scout Troop.

This club is composed of Y. M. C. A. boys selected from all branches of the Y. M. C. A. as well as Boy Scouts in good standing in the most progressive cities of the country. All of these boys are hustling to earn this trip through securing subscriptions to two prominent publications, Woman's Home Companion and the American Magazine.

The local delegate, Channing Clapp, is now on the last lap of his campaign. He is working hard to complete his list by July 1st, and has made such fine progress already that there is little doubt of his success.

EDWIN VAN AKEN GOES ON WITNESS STAND

Defendant Tells of His Movements on the Day of the Murder of His Wife and is Put Through a Rigid and Lengthy Cross Examination.

A sensation was sprung in the Van Aken murder trial this morning soon after the opening of court when Mr. Brinnier called the defendant to the stand. Van Aken's testimony on direct examination was soon given and he was then subjected to an exhaustive cross-examination by District Attorney Cunningham, which is still in progress.

After the opening of court Mr. Brinnier introduced in evidence the two keys whch had been used to unlock the desk from which Van Aken claimed the $220 had been stolen.

Van Aken Takes the Stand.

Van Aken was then called to the stand. He said to Mayor Canfield's questions that he had lived at Port Ewen for five years and before that on the farm opposite Esopus Lake. He is 53 years old.

On the evening before the murder he was cleaning up leaves around the house when Chester B. Thorpe asked him if he could change a $20 bill. Thorpe owed him $12 for some monumental work. Van Aken said he could not.

Did Not Arise Until 7 A. M.

The morning of the murder he arose a little ofter 7 o'clock, dressed and went down stairs, fed his chickens, fed his horse, cleaned the horse and stable and was busy in the barn when Mrs. Van Aken called him for breakfast. They ate together. He had intended going away on the early West Shore train. Mrs. Van Aken said she was glad of it as she wanted him to take her shopping to Kingston in the afternoon. She asked him to drive the horse first as it was feeling high, and he replied he would. He drove to Rodman's house, then to Rondout, bought some meat, paid a coal bill at Sleights and came home.

Called on Neighbor Thorpe at 10 A. M.

After breakfast he wrote a couple of letters, mailed them at the post office a few minutes after 9 o'clock and returned home with his own and Mr. Thorpe's mail. He had seen Mr. Thorpe earlier in the morning and they spoke about changing his money and after returning from the post office he went to Thorpe's house about 10 o'clock. He handed Thorpe his change for the $20 bill, which he had got at the post office, and talked with Thorpe. At the post office he had mailed a money order to his firm for $12. Before leaving Thorpe he bought a box of cigars.

Returning to his own house, he read the mail and then Mrs. Van Aken, who had been housecleaning, asked him to help place different articles, which he did. He prepared to go out. He asked if he should give a pan of garbage to the chickens but she said no, she would take the stuff out later.

Then he went to the barn, hitched his horse and in the neighborhood of twelve o'clock left the barn and started on his way to Rondout by way of Green street, Main street, Bayard street, Hasbrouck street and thence to Broadway and the ferry.

Where He Visited Rondout.

In Rondout he drove up Hasbrouck avenue and looked for a place to tie his horse. He drove to Frank Griffiths's corner, turned and came down to a telephone pole on a line with George Main's shop. Then he walked to Shader's butcher shop and bought a porterhouse steak, crossed the street to Stephen Shufeldt's hotel, where he and Mr. Hanna, the bartender, exchanged a few words and Van Aken bought a milk punch. Leaving Shufeldt's he made a small purchase at Avnet's clothing store and walked to his wagon. John F. Irwin was in his saloon door and they exchanged a few words. Van Aken went inside, drank a milk punch and then drove to the ferry.

Returning to Port Ewen.

On the Sleightsburgh side he stopped at Sleight's store, paid a coal bill and drove directly home to his barn. He unhitched the horse, stabled him, closed the barn and went to the house, entering the back door.

Discovering the Murder.

From this point, Van Aken told his story interrupted by but few questions. He said:

"I called my wife but got no response. I went through the door into the sitting room and called again, but got no reply. I noticed one or two letters protruding from the side of the desk. The lid was closed and only the points of the letters protruded through. They were just ordinary envelopes. I went through the parlor, into the hall, upstairs and as I turned to go in the bed room I found my wife lying on the floor.

Rushed to the Telephone.

"I went right to her and placed my hand on her head. I found she was dead. Then I don't know exactly what I did. I rushed down stairs as quick as I could and called up Mr. Vanderveer, Dr. Ross and my brother. Dr. Ross came at once I think—I was so excited I could not tell. We went upstairs together.

"The can of garbage I found had been emptied when I returned.

Admits He Returned at 2 p. m.

"A few minutes after Dr. Ross arrived, Mr. Vanderveer came and I took him upstairs. We consulted and it was only a few minutes when my brother and his wife came. During the afternoon a large crowd of people came. When I consulted Mr. Vanderveer I told him to notify the proper authorities as quickly as possible, and as soon as the unfortunate affair got noised about the village, a large number of my friends came to see me."

Q—"Can you tell what time you returned from Rondout?"

A—"It was in the neighborhood of two o'clock. I looked at my watch in the barn."

The house door he entered on his return home was the rear door.

Cunningham Begins Cross-Examination.

Cross-examination:

The night before the murder he was raking leaves. The leaves had been falling and there were many on the ground; the dry summer had caused them to fall all summer and they were pretty well all off.

Less Than $5 In His Pocket.

That morning he had some money in his pocket—not as much as five dollars. "I had money in my pocket but I don't know the amount."

Q—"The amount you sent to the Oneonta Company was what?"

A—"Twelve dollars."

Q—"Did you owe them any more than that?"

A—"To the best of my knowledge that was all I owed."

Went to Rondout to Exercise Horse.

Q—"Tell the jury why you went to Rondout that morning."

A—"To exercise my horse. He was high spirited and made my wife nervous and she wanted him tamed down."

Also Went to Pay Rodman.

Q—"Anything else?"

A—"I wanted to pay Mr. Rodman and Mr. Sleight and buy some meat."

Q—"When were you to eat that meat?"

A—"That night possibly."

Q—"Not possibly, but when positively?"

A—"That night."

How the Horse Was Exercised.

Q—"The only exercise the horse got was being tied in front of a Rondout saloon when you got there?"

A—"That was only a few minutes."

Q—"You had a tie post in front of your house?"

A—"Yes."

Q—"But on your return you put the horse in the barn?"

A—"Yes."

Chops Were Not Cooked at Noon.

Van Aken didn't notice the condition of the kitchen stove but he did notice three chops on the stove-shelf.

Q.—"Were they cooked before you left home?"

A.—"They were not."

Q.—"Did you tell Dr. Ross you left the house between 11 and 11:30 that morning?"

A.—"I may have."

Q.—"And you told that to Mr. Lounsbery?"

A.—"I may have."

Q.—"But you didn't pass Rodman's barn at 11:40?"

A.—"I didn't look at my watch."

Q.—"But you say you left your barn until twelve?"

A.—"That was the time."

Had Banking Business; Did Not Do It.

On the ferry boat crossing from Sleightsburgh to Rondout he saw Mr. Becker and Wallace Hutchings.

Q.—"Did you have any other reason for going to Rondout that day?"

A.—"I did not."

Q.—"Did you go to the bank that day?"

A.—"I did not."

Q.—"Did you tell Wallace Hutchings you had some banking business to attend to?"

A.—"I did."

Q.—"Did you have any banking business that day?"

A.—"I did."

Q.—"Did you do it?"

A.—"I did not."

Wanted to Go On Early Train on Business.

The only reason for his wanting to go away on the early West Shore train that morning was a business engagement.

Q.—"Anything else except business?"

A.—"No, nothing else."

But Had Talked About Fishing Trip.

Q.—"Wasn't you going fishing early that morning with Louis Kegler and Mr. Cameron?"

A.—"We had talked about it for a week."

And Telephoned to Mrs. Lundy.

Q.—"Didn't you call up Mrs. Lundy at six o'clock that morning and tell her you couldn't go fishing and that day because your wife was ill and you had to stay home?"

A.—"I don't recall what I said."

Q.—"Or did you tell her that the reason you couldn't go was because you were going away on the train to keep a business engagement?"

A.—"I don't recall."

Q.—"Do you deny that you told

INCONSISTENT?

IN these progressive days, when anyone openly declares that some one thing in particular "cannot be done" we sincerely feel that he talks foolishly.

And yet, when anyone has the audacity to look us in the face and hint that someone at some time may produce a brew that will exceed our

If this is inconsistent—and consistency is truly a jewel—we can only say that we never were very strong for jewelry anyway.

DR. COLLIER LEAVES $20,000 TO CHARITY

Hospital, Industrial Home and First Dutch Church Each to Receive $5,000—Another $5,000 Divided Between Salvation Army and Zion Church.

The will of Dr. Philip Bronk Collier of this city has been filed for probate in surrogate's court. The value of the estate is $15,000 real and $40,000 personal property. The entire estate is left in trust to his wife, Anna Tallmadge Collier. His brother-in-law, Benjamin B. Tallmadge, of Brooklyn and Virgil B. Van Wagonen of this city are appointed executors and trustees of the estate. It provides that at his wife's death a number of legacies to be made to relatives and bequests of $5,000 each to the Kingston City Hospital, the Industrial Home and First Dutch Church, and also $5,000 to be divided equally between the Salvation Army and the A. M. E. Zion Church of this city. A bequest is also made to Bethany Mission. V. B. Van Wagonen is attorney.

The will is dated May 28, 1914, and was witnessed by Assemblyman Henry R. DeWitt and E. L. Angle, and provides first that all just debts and funeral expenses be paid. When that has been done all of the estate both real and personal property is left in trust to Benjamin B. Tallmadge and Virgil B. Van Wagonen to care for and keep invested for the maintenance of his wife, Anna Tallmadge Collier, during the term of her natural life. Should the income be insufficient the trustees are directed to pay his wife such money from the principal as may be necessary. This provision is made in lieu of the wife's dower rights.

The will directs that the trustees in investing and re-investing the funds of the estate consult and advise with A. M. Kidder & Company of New York city. The trustees are also required to give bond.

Upon the death of his wife, Anna Tallmadge Collier, the will directs this from the principal remaining in the hands of the trustees that they pay the following legacies:

To the Kingston City Hospital, the sum of $5,000, for the purpose of endowing a room and bed in that institution in the name of himself and wife to be known as the "Bethany room and bed," and to be used and enjoyed when the occasion required by the members of the Bethany Mission and the First Dutch Church of this city and at other times for the general uses and purposes of the hospital.

To his sister, Miranda J. C. Lampman, the sum of $5,000, and if she be dead, to her sons, Isaac Collier Lampman, and J. B. Lampman, share and share alike.

To his wife's brother, Benjamin B. Tallmadge, the sum of $5,000.

To Jennie A. Whitbeck, daughter of his deceased sister, Maria, the sum of $5,000, but if she die before his wife the bequest goes to the board of domestic missions of the Reformed Church of America and to the board of foreign missions of that church, share and share alike, the legacy to be known as the Dr. Philip Bronk Collier and Anna Tallmadge Collier fund. He further expresses the wish that his niece, Jennie A. Whitbeck, shall provide by a will that so much of the legacy as remain unexpended at her death go to the two boards of the church.

To his nephew, Theodore F. Collier, son of his brother, Isaac H. Collier, the sum of $5,000.

To his great nieces, Kate M. and Lizzie Wolfe, the sum of $5,000 share and share alike.

He further directs that should his estate be insufficient to pay the legacies made in full that then all of the legacies except the legacy to the Salvation Army and the A. M. E. Zion Church, shall be paid in full or so much thereof as the estate will pay before any money shall be paid to the Salvation Army or the A. M. E. Zion Church.

The furniture, pictures, statuary and vases are given to Benjamin B. Tallmadge.

His jewelry to his nephew, Harold P. Tallmadge.

His medical books to the Kingston City Hospital.

His religious books to his niece, Miss Jennie A. Whitbeck, and his great nieces, Katie M. and Lizzie Wolfe.

His miscellaneous books and dictionaries to his nephew, Harold P. Tallmadge.

The books are to be delivered at the death of his wife or at such time as his wife may request.

From the residue of the trust estate he directs that at the death of his wife one-half be given to his nephew, Harold P. Tallmadge, and the remaining half to Bethany Mission, provided the mission shall at the time of distribution be incorporated and legally capable of taking and holding the legacy. If not the money is to be paid to the First Dutch Church of this city, and should the mission cease to exist it is to be held by the First Dutch Church and known as the Collier Endowment fund for general church purposes.

At the close he directs that should any of the legatees named in the will contest the will that the legacy given the one contesting is revoked.

Read Books in Old Days.

"The kind of books people read nowadays is rather startling." "Yes," replied Mrs. McGudley, "but I have my doubts whether folks stop dancin' long enough to read 'em. When I was young we used to read books and pretend we didn't. Now people pretend they read 'em and don't."

Mrs. Lundy your wife was ill and that was the reason you couldn't go fishing?"

A.—"I told her—"

Mr. Cunningham.—"I ask you to answer that question, yes or no."

Van Aken—(To the stenographer) —"Just repeat that question."

Question repeated.

A.—"I telephoned to Mrs. Lundy, but I don't recall the exact language I used."

Wife Ill Early in Morning.

Q.—"Was your wife ill that morning?"

A.—"She complained when she got up."

Q.—"But she wanted to go shopping just the same?"

A.—"Not until an hour afterward."

The Mr. Cameron who was to go fishing was James R. Cameron, who conducts a saloon on Broadway, Kingston.

Can't Recall Time He Telephoned.

Q—"You do recall that you telephoned to Mrs. Lundy?"

A—"Yes."

Q—"Do you deny that it was at six o'clock?"

A—"I can't recall the time."

Q—"You won't deny it for any other reason?"

A—"No."

Q—"You don't deny it for the reason that you didn't get up until seven o'clock?"

A—"I tell you I don't recall the time."

Q—"But you didn't get up until after seven, did you?"

A—"No."

Q—"Then do you deny that you telephoned at six o'clock?"

A—"I don't recall."

Recollection Continues Bad.

The chickens were fed several times a day and he fed them that morning. When he left the place Mrs. Van Aken was standing at the kitchen table.

Q—"Did you tell Sheriff Doyle that when you left the place she was feeding the chickens?"

A—"I don't recall."

Q—"Wasn't she in the yard?"

A—"I don't recall it."

Q—"Did you go to your barn, door look out, and as Miss Alice Niese turned the corner, did you turn back again?"

A—"I don't recall it."

Particular About Locking Barn.

Van Aken said he did not always keep his barn door locked.

Q—"Did you tell Mr. Doyle and Mr. Dumond you always kept it locked?"

A—"I can't recall the language. I told them in regard to it."

Q—"I don't care for the language. Was that the effect of what you said?"

A—"I told them I kept it locked."

Q—"When you admitted the officers to the barn, you unlocked it?"

A—"Yes."

Q—"And you had locked it when you came back from Rondout?"

A—"Yes."

Q—"Notwithstanding the fact that you intended to drive your wife to Rondout to do some shopping right after dinner?"

A—"It was a snap lock; I may have locked it."

Q—"You knew she had pork chops in the house?"

A—"Yes."

Q—"What was your reason for going to Rondout between 12 and 2, without your lunch, and buying steak when you knew she had pork chops there and you were going to take her to Rondout in the afternoon to do some shopping?"

Q—"She was housecleaning and said we would get a light lunch when I got home."

Hands "Seemingly" Cold.

When he entered the room where her body lay he felt of her hands.

Q—"And they were cold then?"

A—"Seemingly so, but I was excited.

Q—"Did you tell Dr. Ross they were cold."

A.—"Seemingly so to me. I was cold myself."

Q.—"It was a warm, beautiful October day?"

A.—"It was an ideal day."

Repeats His Actions in Detail.

Van Aken then repeated in detail just what he had done after entering the house, laying his packages on the table, calling his wife, getting no response, he went in the sitting room between the desk and telephone, he noticed the desk had been opened, or that two letters were protruding from the edge, but thought nothing of it because his wife had access to the desk the same as he did; walked in the parlor and called, received no response, went up stairs and found his wife.

Q.—"What did you do in that room?"

A.—"I was almost dumb for a moment. I went to my wife and felt of her hands and placed my hand on her head. I was so excited and dumbstruck I hardly knew what I did but I jumped down stairs three steps at a jump and through the parlor and telephoned to Mr. Vanderveer, Dr. Ross and George Van Aken. He was still standing between the door and the telephone when Dr. Ross came in.

From that time on either Dr. Ross or Mr. Vanderveer or George Van Aken or the officers were in his presence except when he went down stairs to meet Mr. Vanderveer. He and Dr. Ross were up stairs when he heard Mr. Vanderveer and came down stairs to meet him.

Denies Statements to Dr. Ross.

Q.—"Did you do anything while you were down stairs then?"

A.—"No."

Q.—"Didn't you examine the desk at the time you went through the room the first time?"

A.—"No."

Q.—"All you saw was the letters sticking out?"

A.—"Yes."

BRYAN'S RESIGNATION.

The resignation of William Jennings Bryan as Secretary of State is not particularly fortunate for the Wilson administration but it is a good thing for the country. Since the war clouds have been hovering above the horizon he has been a nonentity in international politics, so far as actual influence or work has been concerned, and in diplomatic relations which on account of the war have been extremely difficult and delicate to handle.

Wilson's hand has held the throttle during the entire Mexican disturbance and it has been his hand also that has penned the notes to the warring nations and to Mexico. While problems of statecraft needed attention, Bryan was busy writing letters to procure jobs for "deserving Democrats," and with the ordinary Democratic job-hunter, in a contest for the presidential nomination Bryan ought to stand stronger than his more intellectual superior.

In most matters the President has ignored his premier and undoubtedly this sensible attitude was due to a full realization of his prime minister's limitation of capabilities. As a talker Mr. Bryan can outdistance the President, as a thinker his mind operates in different channels, as a diplomat he is not the equal of the President, but as a politician he can procure more jobs for "deserving Democrats," buttonhole more delegates and shake hands with more people in an hour than the President and the rest of the Cabinet combined.

A President is to be elected in less than eighteen months, and it is quite possible Bryan had this fact in mind when he submitted his resignation. As a member of the cabinet his jaw could be loosened only on the Chautauqua circuit and his hands were tied except as a letter-writer seeking jobs for "deserving Democrats." Now that he is out of the cabinet, both his jaw and his hands will have free play and it will be surprising if the War Horse of Defeat does not soon begin to use both in an effort to become again a Presidential nominee.

It is surprising that a man occupying the position of Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, should make the statement that the newspapers of the United States are influenced by money in their criticism of Frank Walsh, the chairman of the Federal Commission on Industrial Relations. "In nearly all the newspapers of the country," he says, "we see bitter criticism and attacks upon Frank Walsh as chairman of the Federal Commission on Industrial Relations. That these attacks and this criticism have their origin in the millions at the disposal of the Rockefellers, money used to poison the minds of the people, is beyond dispute. Frank Walsh has no advertising to distribute and no secret fund from which he can draw to give to the newspapers." Gompers occupies a prominent position. "The millions at the disposal of the Rockefellers" have been just as numerous for the past fifteen or twenty years as they are today, and even Sam Gompers ought to be able to remember when the newspapers throughout the country were unanimous in their criticism of the Rockefellers and condemnation of the methods they employed in gathering their millions. It would even appear that most of the criticism has continued to this day and in parallel columns with criticism of Walsh has appeared criticism of the Rockefellers. If the Rockefellers have a "secret fund" from which to draw "to give to the newspapers," the newspapers are not allowing the fund to influence their criticism. Walsh and Gompers may not have "money to poison the minds of the people," but they have something which is just as bad, and that is a prejudiced and pre-judged state of mind that shows lack of the truth. When men talk as Gompers talks is it too much to say they would not stoop to questionable methods to accomplish their aim? Gompers's idea is that criticism and support can be bought. Is his criticism determined in that way?

VERSATILITY NEEDED.

(By Our Woman Editor).

When we see a woman out in the world of business, successfully financing an enterprise that calls for ability, watchfulness and executive management, we give her all the respect and admiraion that always follows the possession of brains or marked accomplishment.

A great business concern, well managed and made to yield the best possible returns for capital invested, means that back of it must stand someone whose hand is always at the helm to guide and direct and to make the most of resources.

But what is housekeeping, homekeeping, but a business, and one that calls for the display of exceptional versatility, a clear head, well arrayed ideas of management, economy and expenditure, for the housekeeping end of it; and for the homekeeping aspect, the spirit that makes for harmony, peace and the wondrous influence that works in the shaping of human lives.

And such a business! That is, when well done.

In its dual aspect and all its side issues, there are not many—are there—activities in life that call for the display of greater versatility than the business that centers in the home.

One who manages expenditures and directs service in a home where wealth dominates and luxuries are everyday things, does well if she keeps the drama of home life sweet and wholesome; but prosperity and comfort will not fly away if she drifts outside a bit and leaves to others the bulk of management. With her, it is a question of will; the more she is there and the happier her spirit, the brighter the home and the more contented the folk who are in it.

But what to her is a question of will becomes a "must" to the woman whose dollars are few and who must stretch them as far as she can. And don't let any mere man fail to remember that it takes all a woman's best wit to keep the table well spread with a tempting variety and still have left sufficient funds for necessities. It needs more than "a bunch of wild flowers and dainty napery," as aesthetic folk tell us, to "make a meal a symphony, a poem," and when meat is dropped in the interest of economy or health, it means that someone must do a lot of thinking and planning if there is to be that satisfied, peaceful spirit so coveted around the family table.

It means that she cannot sit home with menu card in hand, telephoning for each item she wants; she must look about, determine values for herself and get the best for the money expended, else there is a shortage in funds or the happy spirit goes by. The manager of any business who buys economically and is a good judge of values ranks high in his particular field and is called practical and wise. Why not the manager in the home, who must bring to bear exactly the same qualifications if her success is in kind?

She must proportion expenditures for each department, secure a nice balance and still have a fund for the odds and ends that never fail to arrive. And that is no small thing to accomplish when each item must be trimmed down to the lowest possible figure and the family spirit be kept floating along.

In the matter of family clothing, distinctly different capabilities are required, and the small income which calls for prunng and cutting in other departments is even more exacting here. A goodly bulk of the family sewing must bear her handiwork, else ends will not meet.

And if the furniture, as well as the spirit, remains shining and bright, there is patching and polishing in that department to be done by the presiding genius, else shabbiness will settle like a cloud.

Of course, the family physician cannot be consulted for every passing ill so she must have at least an amateur's knowledge of medicine, hygiene, surgery and nursing, must know something of the complaints that are part of childhood, how to ward them off, if possible, or cope with them when they must be met.

And while endeavoring to preserve physical health, there is the directing of character by influences which may have a bearing on generations to come. For in the training of children, sound in soul, mind and body, the mother must serve early and late.

There, too is the little home-help the child needs to straighten out tangles in his school work. If the mother cannot help him when the lessons are not clear to the young, growing mind, he has not an equal chance with one who has such an advantage.

And what about the necessity for keeping posted on the happenings of the world, that she may remain bright, companionable and ready for the evening talks that keep alive the runaway family spirit?

There is nothing far-fetched or extreme in these demands; they are simply the everyday qualifications of the housekeeper-homekeeper, whose abiding place is not a house alone, but a home, a home maintained on funds that are small. The task is not a light one, and though the setting is inconspicuous, the service is real, whatever the laurels missed or the laurels received.

"You say you have no references as a cook. How is that?" "Well, you see, mum, I've always stayed in wan place until the people died."—Boston Transcript.

Miss Sweetthing—"When we are married, we must have no secrets from each other. You must tell me everything." Mr. Saphedde—"But—er—really, I don't know everything."—Puck.

Mrs. Crawford—"I saw your husband motoring today. He seems to be a careful driver." Mrs. Crabshaw—"Indeed, he is. He generally makes a car last until a new model is out."—Judge.

Diamond Cut Diamond.

"The villagers of Dunfermline," said a Philadelphia editor, "rotten-egged Andrew Carnegie's bronze statue because they thought he had come out in the Kaiser's defense.

"But all that has been rectified now. The grand old man of Dufermline has explained himself by cable from Fifth avenue to his Scottish fellow villagers. The dull brown crust of egg has been washed carefully and repentantly from the bronze.

"Mr. Carnegie, discussing this episode, said it was due to ignorance about his interviews. The Dufermline people were as ignorant about his interviews on the Kaiser as the two farm hands were ignorant of time telling.

These two old hands met during the holidays in the general store, he said. Bill had received a Christmas gift of a silver watch from his boss, and Jack, being jealous, said to him before the crowd:

"'What time have ye got, Billy?'

"Bill flushed darkly. Then a good idea came to him, and he took out his new watch and held its face towards his friend.

"'There she be,' he said.

"Jack flushed darkly in his turn. Then he, too, made an effort.

"'Blamed if she ain't,' said he."—Philadelphia North American.

He Qualified.

"Tommy Atkins" pleaded exemption from church parade on the ground that he was an agnostic. The sergeant-major assumed an expression of innocent interest.

"Don't you believe in the Ten Commandments?" he mildly asked the bold free thinker.

"Not one, sir," was the reply.

"What! Not the rule about keeping the Sabbath?"

"No, sir."

"Ah, well, you're the very man I've been looking for to scrub out the canteen."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Excess.

In a military argument in Los Angeles, Gen. John P. Story said:

"Drill, even drill, can be carried to such excess that, from being a virtue it becomes a vice—just as four aces in a game of cards fill every heart with admiration, while five cause all manner of turmoil and hatred."—Los Angeles Times.

On Tolerance.

At the German-American Chamber of Commerce in New York an agent for the purchase of woolens said:

"A better spirit, a spirit of tolerance, is now manifesting itself. On the boat coming over, a French shoe buyer and an English cloth buyer shared my table with me and we got on well.

"'Gentlemen,' I said to those chaps one morning, 'we Germans and you English and French are not all thieves, vandals and murderers. With us it is like the dog riddle.

"'Why is a dog like a man?' a boy asked.

"'Give it up,' said another boy.

"'Because it's bow-legged.'

"'But,' said the second boy, 'all dogs are not bow-legged.'

"'Well, neither are all men.'"—New York Times.

PORT EWEN.

Port Ewen, June 9.—Remember the strawberry festival to be given by the Christian Endeavor Society of the Reformed Church on Friday evening, June 11. This promises to be a good time for everyone. An entertainment will be given at 8 o'clock. One of the features of the evening will be an "Old Fashioned Spelling Bee," in which all may take a part. Ice cream, strawberries and cake will be sold during the evening.

Esopus Council, No. 42, Daughters of Liberty, will meet this evening at 8 o'clock in their rooms in Hutton's Hall. The representative to state council, Mrs. Carey Secor, will give in her report at this meeting.

Mrs. A. J. Rodman of South Broadway called on Mrs. James R. Rodman on Hasbrouck street Monday evening.

The members of the Reformed Sunday school will meet at the church at 7:30 tonight, Wednesday, to rehearse the Children's Day music. It is hoped that a large representation will be present.

WEST PARK.

West Park, June 8.—There was a lovely wedding at Ascension Church on Thursday morning when Walter Jamieson and Miss Della Hickey were married. Howard Mackey was best man and Miss Bridget Lorin bridesmaid, and the church was beautifully decorated with roses and other flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Jamieson left at 6:50 for Brooklyn and Atlantic City for a wedding trip.

Miss Gretchen Schickle has a most delightful house party at the Schickle cottage near the river. Five young ladies who with herself recently graduated from Putnam Hall, Poughkeepsie, make up the party.

Mrs. J. J. Smith and family arrived in town on Saturday and have opened up Heartsease.

Wiring for electric lighting is now finished in Ascension Church and probably by Tuesday or Wednesday the work of redecorating the walls will be begun. This will render it necessary to close the church for two or three weeks. After the contract work is done a new carpet will be laid in the church.

The work on the new state road progresses too slowly for auto riders as the going is extremely uncomfortable. But the satisfaction is a good road will be all the greater because of present inconvenience.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Atkins are entertaining cousins from Kingston.

Miss Myra Covert is taking the place of Miss Dorothea Schickle in the school at Arlington. Miss Schickle is in very poor health and was obliged to give up her work.

Herbert Gindrat of New York spent last Sunday with his mother. The life of a big city seems to agree with him very well, still he was glad to be at home for a few days.

The Field Day at New Paltz attracted quite a number from West Park, who report a fine time.

Men will begin wiring Ascension rectory for electric lighting on Monday. It is hoped by many residents of the River road that the wires will be strung either from Highland or Port Ewen very shortly. The Central Hudson or the Kingston Company will find many costumers awaiting the first to come.

COTTEKILL.

Cottekill, June 8.—The Reformed Sunday school will hold their Children's Day exercises on Sunday evening June 13, at 8 o'clock.

The Misses Alta Christiana and Edyth Jones of this place and William Sarine and Neil Reardon of Wurtsboro motored to Kingston on Sunday and called on Miss Anna Mae Hotaling.

Mr. and Mrs. Silas Snyder and son of Kingston spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. James Snyder.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Roosa spent Sunday with his parents at Stone Ridge.

Simon Snyder spent Friday and Saturday with friends at Kingston.

ELLENVILLE.

Ellenville, June 9.—R. W. D. D. G. M. Sister Minnie H. Thorpe of Saugerties and R. W. A. G. L. Brother George K. Colden of Kingston paid their annual official visit to Wawarsing Chapter, No. 253, O. E. S., Monday evening. The above grand officers represent the 11th district P. D. D. Miss Grace V. Merritt and W. M. Mrs. Mary Myers of Clinton Chapter, Kingston, were also in attendance. There was a large attendance of members of Wawarsing Chapter and the very able addresses as delivered by the visiting officials were very heartily received and applauded. The address of Sister Thorpe was an inspiration and the high tribute she paid the members for their work, especially of their floor work, was certainly very much appreciated. Under Brother Colden's direction following his excellent address, the Star degree was exemplified. The decorations of the hall at this time was considered to have been never more beautiful. The floral decorations in the colors pink, white and green, were flowers of our own section, which included the May flower, or pinkster, the daisy and the beautiful mountain laurel just in bud. Never a more beautiful combination. The official visitors at the time each were presented with a gift as an appreciation of the members of Wawarsing Chapter. The presentation was made by Mrs. Lizzie DeVany, who presented to Sister Thorpe a beautiful cut glass compote and to Brother Colden a gold pocket knife attached to a chain. Each official responded very happily as gifts, as presented, were accepted by them. This was followed by the acceptance of the invitation for all to repair to the dining hall where a very elaborate banquet was served and to which all did ample justice. There was no speech-making, as is the general custom. The banquet was coupled with a social hour and at its close—and just before dismassal—a very clever surprise was enjoyed in the form of a trio recitation in wnich Mrs. Jessie B. Moser, Mrs. Nellie V. Sawyer and Miss Carolyn Clark had a part, and as recited all together it proved to be a very humorous but a very enjoyable affair and good nights followed as all voted the affair to have been one of the most successful and enjoyable ever held, with due thanks to members of Wawarsing Chapter for the success of the evening set apart for the visit of the officials of the 11th district.

TAXATION PROBLEMS.

Mr. Brown's Address at Grange Open Air Meeting.

Lake Katrine Grange held an open air meeting on Monday night for the purpose of hearing an address by James R. Brown of New York on "Taxation and the Farmer." The speaker held his audience from first to last and handled his subject in a most convincing manner. He spoke in part as follows:

The farmers of the state complain and justly so that considering the services rendered them by society they are overtaxed. For many years they have been trying to get rid of this unjust burden but have failed to lighten the load. The reason of the failure is the lack of economic knowledge, the failure to see the difference in effects between a tax on labor values and a tax on land values.

The farmers have tried to lighten their load by taxing wealth, not knowing that all taxes of wealth are ultimately paid by the users of wealth; in other words, all taxes upon labor values are added to the cost of living. Therefore it is entirely out of the question to help the farmer by any tax that falls upon things produced by labor.

The single tax is the only tax that will lighten the farmers' burden. The single tax will fall on land values only. Land value is the value of land independent and exclusive of the improvement thereon. The farmer owns very little land value indeed for his farm consists of almost labor value entirely.

Take away the labor values represented in the clearing, stumping, cleaning, fencing, draining, the house, barn, outhouses, orchard, crops, etc., and a farm worth $10,000 would not have more than $500 of value that could be called land value left. If we charged 5 per cent on that the single tax would cost the farmer $25 per year in full payment for all service rendered him by society.

This amount looks small and it should be small for the farmer gets mighty little from society in the way of public utilities.

The entire land value of all the farms of the state of New York does not exceed $400,000,000, while the land value of the ordinary lots of the city of New York is $7,000,000,000.

Taxes should be collected where taxes are expended and where social presence and social service confers vast advantages as rendered by the enormous land values.

Star Course for Next Year.

The social committee of the Y. M. C. A. met on Tuesday and selected the four numbers to comprise the next star course to be held at the Y. M. C. A. The course chosen for next year is an exceptionally strong one and the numbers are from the Redpath Lyceum Bureau. The numbers in the course are "The Servant in the House," presented by a company of seven people. This play is presented in a similar manner to the plays of Shakespeare presented by the Ben Greet players. This is expected to be one of the strongest numbers ever presented. The second attraction is Edward Amherst Ott, who will lecture on "Sour Grapes," considered one of the best lectures given today. The third number is the Old Home Singers, a company of five giving a program of the old songs. The last number is Laurant, "the man of mysteries," and his company in a number of original illusions.

PRIME FAVORITE WITH THE GOTHAM FANS

Roger T. Peckinpaugh, the clever shortstop of the New York American league club, was born in Wooster, O., February 5, 1891, and began his professional career with the New Haven club of the Connecticut league in 1910. His home being in Cleveland, he was watched closely by Cleveland scouts and purchased by that club in the middle of the season. The following year he was farmed to the Portland club of the Pacific Coast league. His work was of high class there and he was recalled and started off the 1912 season as a regular. He was a great favorite of Harry Davis, then managing the Naps, and despite many bad plays and lack of hitting, Davis kept him in the game, believing that he was due to come through with some great ball. When the Naps picked up Chapman, Peckinpaugh was turned over to Frank Chance's New York club. He immediately began to play sensational ball and his cool and brainy work at critical times caused Chance to appoint him captain at the start of the season. Although not a hard hitter, Peckinpaugh has delivered many timely wallops and is a favorite with the Gotham fans.

PENSIONS FOR BALL PLAYERS

Suggestion Made to Enable Veterans to Make Retrograde Movement Easy—One Case Cited.

It was a genuine pleasure I had recently when Billie Sullivan stepped up to the plate to catch for Minneapolis, and yet there was an indefinable feeling came over me that something was not right here. He didn't look natural, says a writer in Milwaukee Sentinel. He had on a different uniform than I was used to and the general setting was unnatural. Some way it seemed to me that "Billie" Sullivan was in the right church, perhaps, but certainly in the wrong pew, if you'll pardon the quotation.

"Billie" Sullivan.

While thinking about him and what a magnificent representative of the species sportsman he is and the wonderful service he has rendered, the thought came to me that regardless of his case and experience, the lot of a professional ball player is "not a happy one." True, the professional player is well paid, but his earning capacity is limited and his rights at all times are subordinate to those of his employer. He may serve faithfully and well many years and suddenly be turned away without seeming thought or consideration. There might be a pension system devised which would apply to faithful servants in baseball, like the pension systems which apply to faithful employees in the industrial world. Then when a player is forced out of the "big noise" after years of faithful service, his pension, together with his minor league salary, would enable him to ease off the going and make the retrograde movement less embarrassing.

I haven't worked this idea out very well, but there is food for reflection even in what has been written.

Keeper and Convict

By JOHN Y. LARNED

Tommy Ruggles and Eddie Barnes were schoolmates. Not only were they schoolmates, but little chums. They left the grammar school and entered the high school at the same time. From the high school they went out into the world to fight the battle of life. Ruggles drifted into the political arena and after an election, during which he had done good work for his party, received the appointment of head of the state penitentiary.

Barnes became a merchant in a small way. He finally formed a partnership with a man who swindled him out of all he possessed. A quarrel ensued that ended in a scuffle, during which Barnes threw his opponent, whose head struck some hard substance, and his skull was fractured. He died, and Barnes was sent to the penitentiary to serve a term of ten years.

When Ruggles and Barnes met, after not having seen each other for several years—the one as keeper, the other as convict—both shed tears.

"Tom," said Barnes, "I'm sorry you are my jailer. I cannot serve out my term, and I am bound to try to escape. And I wish to say to you now that I expect you to do your duty by the state like an honorable man. You may kill me while trying to capture me when I try to escape."

"Don't try the escape game, Ed. It seldom, if ever, pays. And in this case it would be hard on us both. I should certainly do my duty, and you know where that duty would lie. To me you are only one of hundreds of prisoners for whom I am responsible."

Barnes made an effort to serve out his sentence without any attempt to escape. But one day an excellent opportunity offered itself. He was in the yard of the prison near a gateway, which was opened to admit a cart. A storm came up, and the gatekeeper was blinded by a cloud of dust and lightning. Barnes slipped out and ran like a deer.

He ran into a house not far from the prison, where he found a woman. It is difficult to repress sympathy with one hounded for his life or his liberty, and the woman furnished him with a suit of her husband's clothes, and Barnes persuaded her to give him a revolver. But Ruggles at the head of a force was after him, and the convict was seen leaving the house. He had a good start, and when they reached him he was on rising ground behind a stone wall ready to defend himself. Ruggles ordered his men to keep back, telling them that he would go forward and endeavor to persuade the prisoner to surrender. He walked forward till he heard Barnes call out:

"Don't come any farther, Tom. I'm desperate!"

"Give yourself up, Ed. I've got a dozen men down on the road. It will be suicide for you to resist, and to hurt you would be an awful thing for me."

"I can't go back to that life. I'd rather die."

There was a grim silence between them for a few moments; then Barnes added:

"Go back and send your men to take me. I don't want to hurt you, and I'm going to use up the six shots in my revolver."

"I wouldn't send my men where I can do all there is to be done. If any one is to be killed in your recapture I prefer that it should be myself."

"That's not right. I've got to die; you haven't. Don't shoot your old chum or compel him to shoot you. You'll give me a better chance for my life by sending one of your men, or all of them for that matter."

"You know I couldn't do that. I might as well resign my post and lose myself in another country. But it isn't my position that I'm thinking of; it's my honor. The state trusts me to carry out the will of the people, and I'm bound to do so. If you were my own brother or my own father I would be obliged to take you all the same."

"I see how it is, Tom. We're forced by fate into this position. If you'll agree to kill me I'll step out and give you a shot."

"No; you'll have to defend yourself. I must do my duty to the state, but I'm not the state executioner."

"Well, I won't be captured, and you won't accept my life. I don't see that there's anything to be done but for us to say 'Goodby.'"

"You'd better surrender, Ed. With time off for good behavior you'll only have about six years to serve."

"Six years of such life is far worse than death."

"If you won't surrender promise me that you'll defend yourself to the best of your ability; that you won't spare me. If you let me kill you you'll force me to live a life of regret that would be worse than your six years of imprisonment."

"I wish I could stand it to do the rest of the time. It would save you."

"Promise."

There was a delay, after which Barnes promised that he would try to bring himself to the scratch of firing on his old friend.

The men down in the road heard two shots; then all was silent. Rushing up the incline, they saw the keeper and the convict lying dead, clasping each other's hand. A trail of blood from where each had stood when he fired indicated that they had crawled to each other.

I think it rather fine, this necessity for the tense bracing of the will before anything worth doing can be done, writes Arnold Bennett. I rather like it myself. I feel it to be the chief thing that differentiates me from the cat by the fire.

PLAYGROUND ASSOCIATION.

Efforts Being Made For Playground in Down Town Section.

A meeting of the Kingston Park and Playground Association was held on Tuesday evening in the mayor's office at the city hall. Mayor Canfield read a letter he had received from Calvin Tompkins relative to a request from the association to secure a site for a playground in the lower section of the city on the grounds of the Newark Lime & Cement Company on the Strand. Mr. Tompkins stated he would be in Kingston shortly and would confer with the mayor at that time regarding the matter. The larger part of the meeting was taken up with a discussion of the site of the playground in the rear of North Front street compared with Joy's woods site as a playground. Captain Everett Fowler said that he knew of a man who would furnish the apparatus for the North Front street playground. Before the meeting adjourned Senator Charles W. Walton was authorized to draw up incorporation papers of the association. The next meting will be held the evening of June 22 at the mayor's office on John street.

MANY COLLEGE REFORMS DUE TO MISS KIRCHWEY.

(Miss Freda Kirchwey.)

New York, June 9.—Miss Freda Kirchwey, the twenty-one year old daughter of Dean Kirchwey of Columbia College, who delivered the valedictory at the commencement exercises of her class at Barnard College, is a modest young person despite the fact that many reforms in the college were inaugurated by her. The last fraternity member at Barnard was graduated this year, because three years ago Miss Kirchwey attacked fraternities as undemocratic. She is an enthusiastic suffrage worker and a devotee of lawn hockey. She is engaged to Evans Clark, a young instructor at Princeton, but she asserts she will continue after marriage whatever works she undertakes this summer. "I think that every woman should be economically independent," she said. "It seems to obvious to argue."

In Recorder's Court.

Frank O'Donnell and Frank Finley were arrested on Tuesday night by West Shore Detective Goodsell on the charge of train riding. They were arraigned this morning before Recorder Lang but were discharged and warned to get out of town.

Peter Minuet was arrested on the charge of stealing a bottle of milk on Broadway, Policeman Simpson making the arrest. He was also discharged with a reprimand.

West Shore Detective Goodsell also arrested Joseph Koslawski and Henry Smith for being disorderly along the West Shore tracks. They were also discharged and warned out of town.

In the case of The People against Kaplan Avenet, arrested on complaint of John J. White for assault in the third degree, there was no appearance and the demendant was discharged.

A fine of $3 was imposed on Harry Werbalowski, who was arrested on Tuesday night by Policeman Charles Murphy for disorderly conduct. He and Topik Gorga had a war of words and finally got so heated that a fistic encounter followed. This continued until the arrival of the strong arm of the law in the person of Policeman Murphy. Gorga was also fined $3 which was paid.

SINGLE TAX AND CHICKEN PIE

Another get-together meeting of the business men of the city arranged by the social committee of the Chamber of Commerce was held on Tuesday evening in the Y. M. C. A. and as usual was a success. These meetings are arranged by the social committee to promote good fellowship and are preceded by a supper and followed by a smoker and a talk by a worth-while speaker. All of the meetings held so far this year have been successful and the speakers have had messages well worth hearing. Tuesday evening's speaker was no exception to the precedent established at previous meetings. The meeting was held in the large banqueting hall of the association and was preceded by one of "Gus" Bonesteel's famous chicken pie suppers which is all that need be said of the quality and was followed by a smoker.

The speaker of the evening was James R. Brown, a noted tax expert of New York city, who took as his topic "Municipal Revenues." He was introduced by Vice President Leighton who presided in the unavoidable absence of President Kearney. Mr. Brown is a believer in the single tax and delivered a strong argument along that line. He believed that a single tax should be imposed and that upon land, whether improved or unimproved and not upon the buildings. To bring his argument home to his hearers he used Kingston as an illustration. He said the population was 27,000 and that in round numbers meant 5,400 families in the city which covers 5,248 acres of land. He said his hearers should remember that he was simply using round figures and did not claim that they were exactly correct. He then divided the acres up into twelve lots to an acre each lot being 25 by 100 feet. Now you have, he said, 62,976 lots in this city in round numbers. Allow every family three lots which means 162,000 lots in use and still Kingston would have 467,776 idle or vacant lots. Kingston needs to raise by municipal tax each year the sum of $483,000. Place an average tax to 68 cents on the lots in this city whether vacant or in use and it would abolish all taxes on personal property and all taxes on buildings and improvement and yet Kingston would raise by such a tax the sum of $503,000.

On the other hand the speaker said that if a 5 per cent on land values alone the high pcied lot in the city would pay $200 per year, improved or unimproved and the cheap lot would pay $3. Users of land would profit and idlers ould have to get busy. The speaker believed that the single tax was the only tax that did not violate the rights of private property and the only tax that encouraged industry and liscouraged idleness. He believed that public value for public use, private property for private enjoyment, was the only true basis of honest taxation. Mr. Brown was the extremely witty speaker and re-inforced his argument with witty and appropriate stories which he used in endeavoring to make clear the idea he was trying to drive home.

The social committee of the Chamber of Commerce deserve a vote of thanks for their efforts in arranging the interesting meetings that have been held and the attendance speaks well of the success of their efforts.

STRANGER SEEN AT VAN AKEN'S BARN

But This Was at an Early Hour in the Morning—Van Aken Was Sober, Witnesses For the Defense Testify.

That a stranger was standing at the back door of Edwin Van Aken's barn about six o'clock in the morning of the day Mrs. Van Aken was murdered was the testimony of Howard Wiest of Port Ewen in the Van Aken murder trial in county court Tuesday afternoon Wiest said the stranger was facing toward the south but had his face turned toward the east all the time he was looking at him, so he looked him full in the face.

In addition to Wiest's testimony, the defense proved by Chester B. Thorpe that Edwin Van Aken was sober at 5:15 p. m. on the day before the murder and was sober at 10:10 o'clock the morning of the murder. The last that Thorpe, who lives next door, saw Edwin Van was at 10:10 a. m., but the last he had seen Mrs. Van Aken was at 8:30 o'clock that morning.

This testimony, together with that of several men who swore to Van Aken's reputation for peace and quiet, formed the evidence produced during the afternoon by the defense.

Gets Certificate From Dibble.

Mr. Dibble resumed the stand after the noon recess, and to Mr. Brinnier's questions said that from the speech of people, Edwin Van Aken's character for peace and quiet was good.

No cross-examination.

Good Character, Says Sleight.

Benjamin Sleight, of Sleightsburgh, who was a witness for The People, was re-called by the defense. He had known Van Aken well and had transacted business with him and Van Aken's reputation for peace and quiet was good.

Cross-examined, Sleight said he had met Van Aken at night occasionally when they went to lodge; did not visit his house except to deliver goods and knew nothing of Van Aken's relations with his wife, or whether he quarreled with her or called her epithets during the six months preceding her death.

On re-direct examination, he said he delivered goods there once in two weeks, and on such occasions Van Aken treated his wife courteously. He never heard of him ill-treating her.

Rondout Banker Testifies.

Jacob E. Derrenbacher, president of the Rondout Savings Bank, testified he had known Van Aken 25 years, both socially and in business relations. Van Aken's reputation for peace and quiet was very good.

Cross-examined, he said he used to visit Van Aken when he lived with his father, about ten years ago. He never heard of Van Aken's reputation for drunkenness, but had heard incidentally that perhaps he sometimes drank too much; he never heard of his being drunk at all, or that he had locked his wife out of the house, or that he was in the habit of applying vile epithets to her.

Wiest Saw Strange Man at 6 a. m.

Howard Wiest of Port Ewen, testified he lived at Broadway and the River Road, one block from the Van Aken house. At six o'clock in the morning while he was passing the Van Aken barn, he saw a man standing at the rear of the Van Aken barn. The man was a stranger to him. He wore a light suit of clothing and a cap.

At different times he had seen Van Aken drive down Stout avenue, Green street, Main, Bayard, Salem and Hasbrouck streets to Broadway, and thence to the ferry, and had driven with him.

Van Aken's Drinking Companions Not Criminal But Interesting.

Mr. Wiest knew it was about six o'clock because that is the time he usually started for his work at the American Cigar factory in this city.

Cross-examination.

Q—"You've drank with Van Aken, havent you?"

A—"I don't deny it."

Mr. Brinnier—"If it was a crime for any man to drink with another, we'd all be criminals."

Mr. Cunningham—"It's not criminal but it's interesting."

Mr. Wiest denied he ever had been drunk with Van Aken.

Q—"Do you know Floyd Weeks?"

A—"I can't say I do."

Mr. Cunningham asked Floyd Weeks to stand up and he did.

Q—"Do you know that man?"

A—"I can't say I do."

On the morning of October 22, he walked down Broadway to the ferry. He remembered there was a row of flat cedars on the Van Aken property, but they did not hide the strange man from view as he had walked along Broadway. The man was at the back door.

No Memorandum of Saloon Visited.

Last week Mr. Wiest had a talk with George W. Dumond but denied having told him that he must have been mistaken about seeing the man coming out of the barn, after Mr. Dumond told him that Van Aken claimed he always kept the barn door locked, and that he must have seen him at the back of the barn.

Q.—"Do you remember being in Decker's saloon in this city several months ago?"

A.—"I didn't make any memorandum of it."

Q.—"Did you say there, in the presence of Floyd Weeks and others, that you were going to be a witness in the Van Aken case and had seen a man come out of the Van Aken barn that morning?"

A.—"At the barn."

Mr. Wiest said he could not remember making a similar statement in McClure's saloon on Wall street several months ago. He did not remember whether the man had on a gray suit—it was not black, but a light suit. He did not remember telling Mr. Dumond the stranger wore a gray suit.

Accommodating Stranger Kept His Face in View.

The stranger at the barn stood so that Mr. Wiest saw nearly all of his face although it was turned at an angle. The man was looking south, but looked at Mr. Wiest who was on Broadway, which is east of the barn. His body was facing south but his head was turned east, and he was looking at Mr. Wiest so he could see all of the stranger's face while he walked along Broadway.

The man was middle age—about 45 years old—and had a smooth face.

Re-direct examination:

Q.—"Did you know the man?"

A.—"No."

Q.—"Was it Edwin Van Aken?"

A.—"No, it was not."

Stranger Made no Attempt to Hide.

Re-cross-examination:

The flat cedars were not so high but that Wiest could see the man from the waist up, because the flat cedars are lower where the man stood than at any other place in the row.

Mr. Brinnier—"Did you tell George Dumond that you saw him coming out of the back door or you had supposed he had come out of the door?"

A.—"I said I supposed so."

Wiest Never Told the Officials.

Wiest, on re-cross-examination, said he had told different people that he "supposed" the stranger was coming out of the barn.

Q.—"You knew since October 22 last that you saw this man loitering or standing at the rear of the Van Aken barn the morning Mrs. Van Aken was killed. Now did you ever give that information to any public official?"

A.—"No."

Mr. Dumond had called on him at the cigar factory on May 29.

The indictment and endorsements thereon was introduced in evidence by Mr. Brinnier, who read the names of the witnesses sworn before the grand jury.

Postmaster Deyo and Van Aken Friends.

Postmaster Sylvester R. Deyo of this city, who was not in court when his name was called when the other character witnesses were examined earlier in the afternoon, was called at this time. Mr. Deyo is 54 years old and had known Edwin Van Aken for 35 years. Last August the Deyo and Van Aken families took a two weeks' automobile trip together to Lake George. During that trip he did not hear Van Aken call his wife any names or treat her unpleasantly. From the speech of people Van Aken's reputation for peace and quiet was good.

On cross-examination by District Attorney Cunningham, Postmaster Deyo said the Van Akens were his guests during last August's auto trip.

Q.—"You've heard people speak of Van Aken. Now what have you heard people say?"

A.—"Until this came up I never heard anything against him."

Q.—"Before this came up did you hear people say Van Aken was addicted to drunkenness?"

A.—"I couldn't swear I ever heard particular persons say it."

Q.—"Did you hear anyone say it?"

A.—"Probably I did."

He never heard of Van Aken calling his wife vile names. If Mrs. Van Aken told George Van Aken that Edwin was drinking every chance he had while on the trip, Postmaster Deyo did not know it.

Treated His Wife "Lovingly."

James Rodman of Port Ewen, 52 years old, knew Edwin Van Aken for the past 40 years, and also knew Mrs. Van Aken. He had driven the Van Akens to and from the railroad station at different times of the day and at all times Van Aken treated her lovingly. Mr. Rodman had seen Van Aken drive past his house on Hasbrouck street at different times. Broadway, the main road, was macadamized and hard on the horse's feet, while Hasbrouck street and the other streets were soft dirt roads, easy on a horse's feet. Mr. Rodman said Mr. Van Aken's reputation for peace and quiet was good.

Met Van Aken in Rondout.

Cross-examined, Mr. Rodman said that between 12:30 and 1 o'clock on October 22, he was in Rondout and met Van Aken about 12:40 or 12:45 o'clock. They did not meet on a street said Rodman, but on an avenue, and met but did not pass. He did not know that Van Aken looked at him, but he looked toward that side of the street. Van Aken did not stop him to say anything about paying any bill. Witness called out, "Hello, Eddie," and seeing the ferry, ran down Hasbrouck avenue.

Mrs. Rodman Fixes Earliest Time.

Mrs. Marie Rodman, wife of James Rodman, testified Van Aken passed her house between 11:30 and 11:45 o'clock. Mrs. Rodman was in her husband's livery barn at the time.

Cross-examination:

Q—"Did you look at the clock when he passed?"

A—"I did."

Q—"Then what time was it?"

A—"Just about twenty minutes of twelve."

Q—"What was the exact time?"

A—"11:40."

During a 15 minutes intermission following Mrs. Rodman's testimony, Van Aken and his brother, George, and Van Aken's counsel held a conference in one of the rooms of the court house.

Last Saw Van Aken at 10:10; Sober.

Chester B. Thorpe of Port Ewen, the next witness, testified he was a butcher for E. B. Houghtaling and lived next to Edwin Van Aken. On the day of the murder he saw Van Aken. He also saw him the night before while he was raking leaves. Van Aken gave him a cigar. The conversation between them at that time was excluded. Mr. Brinnier asked a number of questions to indicate the conversation, which were not allowed. These questions tended to show that Thorpe offered to pay a bill with a $20 bill, but Van Aken said he would get the change and give it to him the next day.

Van Aken Bought Box of Cigars.

About 9 o'clock on the morning of the murder Thorpe spoke to Van Aken and asked him if he had the change for the $20 bill. Van Aken said he hadn't the change yet but was going up the street to get it. Later Van Aken was at Thorpe's house and gave him the change. He also handed Thorpe his mail from the post office. This was about ten o'clock. The amount of the bill owed by Thorpe was $12, and when Van Aken gave him $8, he gave Van Aken a $20 bill. After the bill was paid, Van Aken said he would take a box of cigars, and Thorpe said he could have the cigars for what he, Thorpe, had paid for them.

Van Aken Sober On Both Occasions.

On the night before the murder, and on the following morning Van Aken, so far as Thorpe could see, was perfectly sober. During the four years he had lived next door he did not hear Van Aken call his wife vile names. The two houses are about 25 feet apart, and there may be a difference of three or four feet in the distance between the two kitchens.

Last Saw Mrs. Van Aken at 8:30 a. m.

Cross-examined by District Attorney Cunningham, Thorpe said that he could not hear conversation in the Van Aken kitchen when in his own kitchen. The conversation on the day before the murder was about 5:15 p. m. About 9 o'clock the morning of the murder when he saw Van Aken, the latter was coming off his back porch; Thorpe was in his own garden.

Thorpe was asked whether he did not testify before the grand jury that Van Aken returned to his house with the mail and change between 9:30 and 10 o'clock. He did not remember and would not say so now; he now thought it was about 10 o'clock. The sale of the cigars took five or ten minutes. That was the last he saw Van Aken until after Mrs. Van Aken's body was found.

Q—"Did you see Mrs. Van Aken between that time and four o'clock in the afternoon?"

A—"Yes, I did."

Q—"At what time did you see Mrs. Van Aken?"

A—"About half past eight o'clock that morning."

Q—"But not after that?"

A—"No, not after that."

Three House Clocks All Different.

On re-direct examination, Thorpe said that from ten o'clock on that morning he was housecleaning and was in the house. When he heard the jumbo whistle blow he looked at his clock and found it was ten minutes slow.

On re-cross-examination he said he did not know that 10:10 o'clock when spoken of as being the last time he saw Van Aken was the correct time; he had three clocks in his house and the time of all of them was different.

V. B. Van Wagonen Drew Bond and Mortgage.

Lawyer Virgil B. Van Wagonen of this city testified he had drawn a blank bond and mortgage to be executed by Van Aken and his wife to Jacob Formansky, using a blank which he presumed the names of Van Aken and his wife had been filled in on the typewriter.

Mr. Brinnier asked whether it was not customary in drawing a bond and mortgage to insert the names of a man and his wife in the acknowledgement when both parties were not present. The question was objected to on the ground that custom was immaterial and the only thing the People were interested in was the Formansky bond and mortgage. Judge Jenkins held that this was so.

Drew Papers at Request of Formansky.

Mr. Van Wagonen said he had drawn the bond and mortgage at the request of Formansky, who was his client.

No cross-examination.

Mr. Brinnier said he could not proceed further with his case at that time and at 4:30 o'clock court adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning.

SCARLET FEVER MUST BE CHECKED

Board of Health Provides Assistance for Health Officer Stelle—Very Bad Milk Found by Dr. Sanderson.

Steps were taken on Tuesday evening to prevent a scarlet fever epidemic spreading over Kingston, when the board of health adopted Health Officer Stelle's suggestion that a public health nurse be engaged to assist him in the workof preventing the spread of the disease of which twelve cases were reported for May and so far this month ten new cases have been brought to light. The board authorized the health officer to secure the services of a nurse for a period of a month at an expenditure not to exceed $100. Dr. Mary Gage-Day, who was present, called attention to the fact that the Ulster County Tuberculosis Committee expect to engage a nurse to make a tuberculosis survey of Ulster county and asked if the board was willing to assist in paying for the nurse's work. The board decided to expend $100 to have a survey made of Kingston, the work to be done by the same nurse employed by the tuberculosis committee.

Another important matter brought up at the meeting was the report of Dr. Raymond Sanderson, county bacteriologist, who has made tests of the milk sold in Kingston at the request of the board, to ascertain the bacterial count. In some milk samples tested 3,000,000 bacteria was found and the figures ran all the way from 1,000 up to the three million mark. "It's a wonder some of the milk bottles don't walk off the front porches," said Commissioner McBride when the figures were read. The report was not made public but was referred to the sanitary inspector, Dr. Clarke, to take the matter up with the milk producers and give them ten days in which to remedy conditions before they were scored by the health officer, to whom Dr. Clarke is to make a complete report.

It was also brought out that the people of Kingston who are purchasing certified milk and paying 15 cents a quart for it, are not getting certified milk.

The meeting did not get under way until after nine o'clock as Mayor Canfield, the presiding officer, was forced to attend two other meetings before he could be present, and it was midnight before the board finally adjourned after transacting a large amount of important business.

Dr. Sanderson's Report.

Mayor Canfield filed the report of Dr. Sanderson, the county bacteriologist, that had been sent to him. The report was a complete one and covered the milk situation in Kingston in regard to the bacterial count in the milk sold in this city. The highest number of bacteria per cubic centimeter found in a milk sample was 3,000,000, while in one instance it was as low as 1,000. Under the new sanitary ordinance of the city grade B milk must not contain more than 300,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter.

Commissioner McBride moved that the report be referred to the sanitary inspector to take up the matter with the milk producers whose milk does not come up to the standard and that the milk producers be given ten days in which to bring the bacterial count to normal and then make a complete report of his findings to the health officer who should then score the milk producers in the grades according to the bacterial count in their milk.

"The report should be referred to me," said Dr. Stelle.

"I beg your pardon," retorted Commissioner McBride, who went on to state that when Dr. Clarke was elected by the board it was because he was a man who knew cattle and the board believed that he was capable of handling the milk situation.

Dr. Stelle retorted that the state department of health held him responsible for the milk situation in Ulster county and that all reports should be turned over to him.

A lengthy discussion followed as to who was supreme the health officer or the board of health, and was finally brought to a close when Mayor Canfield remarked that when the board was in session it was supreme and that the health officer and the sanitary inspector as well as the other officers of the board were merely its representatives, and that the board of health was responsible to the state board for the milk conditions.

The motion of Commissioner McBride was put to a vote at the close of the discussion and unanimously carried.

A Violation of the Law.

It was reported that Louis Amdur had built an outside toilet in the rear of the Novelty theater on North Front street that overlooked the new playground. There is a sewer through North Front street and the secretary was notified to direct Mr. Amdur to have the toilet removed as it was a violation of the sanitary code.

Wants Pig Permit.

Archie Whitaker of No. 476 Albany avenue wrote stating he would like to keep a couple of pigs just for his own use and did not intend to feed them garbage, and that he would welcome any inspection of his premises by the board. The secretary was instructed to issue him a permit.

A Nuisance.

Francis R. Wood of No. 58 Clifton avenue wrote that a year ago he had made a complaint regarding an outside toilet on the property of the state of New York at No. 54 Clifton avenue, but nothing had been done about remeding conditions. The secretary was notified to send a copy of the resolution passed at a previous meeting to the state requesting that the nuisance be abated.

Accept Invitation.

The board accepted the invitation extended by the Knights of Columbus to attend the Fourth of July celebration on the city hall lawn that morning.

Not Certified Milk.

Commissioner McBride called attention to the fact that Dr. Sanderson, the county bacteriologist, had tested a sample of the certified milk sold in this city from the Ulsterdorf dairy at Highland. Mr. McBride said the test showed that the bacterial count showed 60,000 bacteria to the cubic centimeter. Under the regulations of the Dutchess county milk commission there should only be a count of 30,000 bacteria and the test also showed that the milk did not meet the requirements of the milk commission as to butter-fat. "There is something wrong somewhere," concluded Commissioner McBride.

It was brought out that the reason the milk was certified to by the milk commission of the adjoining county was due to the fact that there was no milk commission in Ulster county until lately when the Ulster County Medical Society appointed such a commission. The Ulsterdorf dairy is owned by Miss Grace Roberts and is located at Highland. It was also brought out that the dairy had no right to sell certified milk in Kingston as no permit had been secured from the local board of health as required by the sanitary code. The secretary was instructed to notify the dairy and send Miss Roberts a copy of the ordinance.

The Scarlet Fever Situation.

Dr. Stelle's report as to the scarlet fever situation in this city will be found later on in this article and the question was discussed at length by the board.

Mayor Canfield asked the health officer if he had heard what was the situation in Poughkeepsie. The mayor said that a number of citizens had come to him and told him that there was some kind of an epidemic raging in Poughkeepsie but he had been unable to secure any information as the Poughkeepsie newspapers were silent on that question and the Poughkeepsie mayor had refused to talk about the situation to him.

Dr. Stelle replied that from authoritative sources he had learned that the bridge city was in the grip of a scarlet fever epidemic.

The mayor said he had been asked if he was going to permit the carnival company showing this week in Poughkeepsie to come to Kingston next week

Carnival Won't be Stopped

Health Officer Stelle said he believed there was no danger of the disease being brought to Kingston by the carnival people as they were adults and less likely to be subject to the fever and were safer than the traveling men that traveled back and forth between Kingston and Poughkeepsie.

He Will be on the Job.

"In addition" said Dr. Stelle "I personally inspect every circus or carnival that comes to Kingston and I think that it is perfectly safe to allow them to come here next week and that there will be no danger of the carnival people spreading the scarlet fever."

Quarantine Violated.

Dr. Mary Gage Day who was present at the meeting said that she did not think the quarantine law was being sufficiently enforced. She called attention to the case of a school girl who resided on the Boulevard who was taken sick after school on a Friday and died on Sunday. Neighbors went in and out of the house when the services were being held and she believed that something should be done to stop quarantine from being broken like that. She said that she had listened with interest to Dr. Stell's request for the assistance of a public health nurse and was heartily in favor of the plan as it would tend to decrease the danger of the scarlet fever spreading.

A Tuberculosis Survey.

Dr. Day called attention to the fact that the county tuberculosis committe were arranging to have a survey made of Kingston and Ulster county which would cost between $400 and $600 and asked if it was not possible for the board to assist in defraying the expenses.

The board was in favor of having a survey made but said that it could not pay for any work outside of Kingston.

After some discussion the board appropriated $150 to have the work done in Kingston by the same nurse employed by the county committee. At present the nurse to be engaged is making a tuberculosis survey of Columbia county and will be finished about the middle of this month when she will come to Kingston.

Not Scarlet Fever.

Commissioner McBride said a woman had told him that there had been a scarlet fever case on Washington avenue and that she had notified Dr. Stelle but he had not done anything and she had notified the state board at Albany.

Dr. Stelle said that Commissioner McBride had been misinformed as he had investigated. The physician in attendance had reported the case was not scarlet fever and he had investigated and found that the physicians's report was correct.

Schools Should be Kept Open.

Getting back to the scarlet fever situation the health officer was asked in regard to closing the schools and replied that in his opinion the schools should remain open as he would then be better able to control the situation. He believed it would be better to close the theaters instead of the schools but did not think the situation demanded the closing of the theaters.

Most of the scarlet fever cases at present were mild although there had been some deaths from the malignant form of the fever was to be dreaded as it spread more rapidly and children exposed to the mild form often developed the malignant form of fever.

To Provide Toilet Facilities.

The question of providing toilet facilities during the firemen's parade was brought up and it was referred to the sanitary committee with power.

Reports of Officers.

Health Officer Stelle reported as follows:

During the month of May, 1915, the following communicable diseases were reported and recorded:

Mumps	1
Typhoid	2
Measles	3
Diphtheria	1
Scarlet Fever	12
Tuberculosis	2
Whooping Cough	1
Total	22

So far this month we have had one case of German measles, one of typhoid and ten cases of scarlet fever.

Six of these scarlet fever cases have been discovered by me during the last three days, after numerous investigations.

On Sunday, June 6, I learned that a child had been to school on Friday, June 4, and upon returning home complained of feeling ill; was worse on Saturday and diagnosed by their attending physician as sick with scarlet fever on Sunday morning. I personally quarantined this case at once and about two o'clock that afternoon the child was dead. This shows it to have been a very malignant type of the disease. The school attended was fumigated and aired on Sunday. The teachers have been notified to be especially watchful for pupils that showed any signs of ill health, to send any who do, to their homes at once and notify me, then I visit and examine them until satisfied. I have had the names and addresses of those absent from classes and have visited them at their homes with the result that several cases have been discovered in the early stage and several suspects isolated at home for future inspection.

Now I ask the papers to publish that I want every teacher of every public, private, parochial and Sunday school to dismiss at once any pupil that seems in any way ill and report to me their names and addresses.

Although the number of cases at present are comparatively few, I feel that special precautions should be taken to prevent an epidemic of scarlet fever in this city, such as Poughkeepsie is having, and I fear that the disease is incubating now in many children who were exposed to the case mentioned above.

I am receiving splendid co-operation from the school authorities, the school physician and many citizens. I propose to give the papers the names and addresses of these afflicted at present and daily as new cases develop, in order that more citizens may contribute information that will aid in preventing quarantine requirements from being violated.

I wish to co-operation and feel sure of receiving it.

You can contribute more by supplying a public health nurse to work under my direction than in any other way.

One competent woman clothed with authority can accomplish more in the way of discovering violators of quarantine requirements than several men acting as special police. She can instruct parents how to properly care for the patients and their sputa, and do other things we need help in such as assisting in following up absentees from school, visit suspects from time to time, look for other cases and those who have been in contact with cases, look into the milk and other food supplies, etc.

You have the power to employ a public health nurse and Kingston needs one (especially now).

Again I say we should have an isolated hospital.

Respectfully submitted,
L. K. STELLE, M. D.,
Health Officer.

Sanitary Inspector's Report.

To the Honorable President and Members of the Board of Health of the City of Kingston, N. Y.

I have the honor to submit my report for the month of May, 1915:

Quarantines Placed.

Scarlet fever	9
Diphtheria	1
Typhoid	1
Measles	2
Renovations following tuberculosis	2
Fumigations	7

Inspection of meat shops have been carried out regularly; considerable improvement has been made in the protection of meat. Mr. Shader of Rondout has installed a new refrigerator display counter for meat.

Slaughter houses are keeping up to the best mark their facilities allow them. Four shipments of dressed meat have been inspected and stamped this month.

Baker shops have been inspected but not scored this month as it was understood that a committee of bakers would wait upon the board with regard to said scores, and it seemed better to await decisions and have all in accord.

Concerning garbage pails the sanitary inspector attempted to serve notices for neglect of proper receptacles but found that the violations were far too numerous. The cafe's and fruit stores seem the worst violators, while the residential part of the city is well equipped. Suggestion is offered that a notice be publicly given and after a certain date sanitary inspector serve notrain from placing garbage out until the can is a mass of maggots. Several complaints have been received in this line and in most cases the city men accomplished the removal of the mess.

Complaints referred from last meeting have been satisfied, excepting the swamp matter.

Respectfully submitted,
(Signed) HAROLD CLARKE, D. V. M.,
Sanitary Inspector.

OUR ARMY CAMELS

The Festive Orientals Uncle Sam Once Tried to Adopt.

A BRIEF AND UNRULY CAREER.

Their Deadly Hatred Toward Mules, Their Craving For a Taste of Soldier and a Few Other Eccentricities Proved Their Inglorious Undoing.

The United States government's first and only venture into the use of camels as army transports on the southwestern frontier was sanctioned by congress through the efforts of Jefferson Davis, then a member of the military commission and later secretary of war. Davis had commanded troops in the southwest in the Mexican war and knew what it was to march for days over a dry, barren country in a scorching heat, with nothing to drink but hot, dry air and nothing to greet the eye except cactus and rattlesnakes.

The rapid development of California after the gold strike of 1848 made necessary provision for the transportation of troops and supplies to the new country over a desert trail, which was a task that set patriotism at a premium. Jefferson Davis asked for camels, and congress finally authorized an expedition to the orient to buy them.

The expedition brought back nearly 100 animals, which were added to from time to time till the number grew to 128. They were stationed at El Paso, Yuma, Ariz.; San Antonio and other points on the frontier.

The return trip across the ocean with the camels is recorded in amusing detail by Lieutenant D. D. Porter, who was in charge. Each animal was provided with a competent chauffeur, who was caretaker, interpreter and baggage master in one. Most of the animals got seasick, and so did the drivers, and both complained bitterly of the arrangements. The camels wished they hadn't come and showed it by kicking and biting pieces from various officers, who were not to blame.

After landing in Texas the camels did not improve perceptibly in their natures. Their particular aversion was the army mules. Even the younger, inexperienced camels learned quickly to kill a mule with one blow of the hind foot and indulged in that pastime frequently. Their taste for army officers remained undiminished, and the chauffeurs got the blame every time a captain lost some of his anatomy.

The soldiers took to the camel with reciprocal affection. In the first place, they didn't like his looks, contending that the soft, faraway look in the camel's eye indicated that his mind was not on his business. Then the soldiers couldn't get used to the odor radiated by the oriental beast—circuses not being in vogue—and many of them said that Kipling was perfectly correct in his opinion that a camel smelled most awful vile. Kipling hadn't said it yet, but soldiers are farseeing and knew he was going to say it.

Besides, the camel was no good to ride the soldiers agreed. His ambling, rapid stride made them seasick, and they wanted no animal which it took ten minutes to awaken when the Indians attacked them in the night. No American had lived up to that period who could tie a cargo on one of the beasts so it would stay on. The camel is not constructed flat on top, it is remembered, and only a clever Arab chauffeur could load one to travel any distance without losing the supplies.

The high record in dead mules was made, it is said, by a camel in San Antonio whose name was Major. Major kicked seven valuable mules into eternity, and one day some soldiers, friends of the late mules, took Major off up on a high cliff and came back and said he had fallen off "accidentally." No exhaustive probe was made of Major's disappearance.

A caravan loaded with supplies went into the city of Sutherland Springs on one occasion, and the camels were watered at the town well. It was the boast of the city that the well had never gone dry. About half the camels took a drink and the well was dry. The disturbance caused by the remaining thirsty camels set the population into a panic.

But the endless feud between the camels and the soldiers soon convinced the government that railroads would do just as well. The rush to California was well over and frontier troubles were well under control by the time the war broke out. The government withdrew the foreign camel agents and closed the foreign offices. By the time the war was over the camels died and some were stolen. Others escaped to the desert, and even today a hoary wild camel, white with age, occasionally terrifies Sunday newspaper feature writers into writing something about it. Very likely the ones which didn't go to the desert swam back to Egypt. Both reports are authenticated in the same degree.—Kansas City Star.

MIGHTIEST SUPERDREADNAUGHT TO BE LAUNCHED JUNE 19.

The large picture shows the U. S. superdreadnaught Arizona in course of construction on the ways at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The insert is of Miss Esther Rowes, of Prescott, Arizona, who will christen the big vessel when it is launched on June 19. Instead of the customary champagne being used, Miss Rowes will smash a bottle containing water from the first flow over the spillways of the great Roosevelt dam when she gives the vessel its name. The Arizona will have a displacement of 31,400 tons. She will be 608 feet long and will carry a main battery of twelve 14-inch guns and a secondary battery of twenty-two 5-inch guns.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WHAT TO EAT.

Cream Pie.

MIX one cupful sugar and half cupful flour together. Add the yolks of two eggs and four tablespoonfuls of sweet milk. Season with a pinch of salt. Stir together and put into a pint of boiling milk. Keep stirring until thoroughly cooked. Bake the crust and use as a foundation for mixture. Have the whites of eggs beaten to a stiff froth by adding one-half cupful powdered sugar. Flavor with vanilla and spread over. Brown in oven and add two cupfuls of whipped cream.

Here's a Novelty.

Two cupfuls of minced parsley, four cupfuls of diced potatoes and one cupful of minced onion. Put all in saucepan and add two quarts of cold water and set over fire to boil. When the vegetables are very soft rub through a colander and turn into pan. Add one even teaspoonful of salt and curry powder to suit taste. Whip one pint of cream in a pitcher, add slowly to soup, stirring constantly.

Tomato Puree.

Fry a clove of garlic or a few slices of onion in two tablespoonfuls of butter. When brown remove the garlic and stir in a tablespoonful of flour. Stir in a cupful of stewed tomatoes and when thoroughly heated add a cupful of macaroni which is well cooked. Mix in a cupful of finely minced cold veal. Stir constantly until it is heated thoroughly. Season to taste.

Spanish Steak.

Season a thick, juicy steak and lay in a baking pan. Cover the steak with a generous layer of chopped celery, parsley, onions, tomatoes and sliced ripe olives. Strew lumps of butter over this, pour a cupful of water about the bottom of the pan and bake. The layer of vegetables and olives makes an excellent sauce.

Potatoes and Olives.

Cut boiled potatoes into dice and cover with a thick seasoned cream sauce which has been plentifully filled with sliced ripe olives. Pour into well buttered baking dish and bake.

Egg and Ripe Olive Sandwich.

Slice hard boiled eggs and place upon the center of each a slice of ripe olive. Place upon a layer of thin white bread, spread lightly with mayonnaise and cover with another layer of bread.

Anna Thompson.

Erskine's Puns.

A great wit of the Scottish bar was the Hon. Harry Erskine, who was lord advocate. Though punning is not, as a rule, a high form of wit, with Erskine it became a fine art. On one occasion he undertook to pun on the subject of his friend's first sentence. His friend began, "The king"— Harry intervened. "The king," he said, "is no subject." Again, a Mr. Dunlop challenged him to pun on his name. "Nothing easier," said Erskine. "Lop off the last syllable and it is done."—London Standard.

Cheap Living In Old London.

London laundry charges were noted by Nicholas Decremps, the author of "Le Parisien a Londres," who visited England in 1788. Decremps found his laundry bills excessive, especially the charge of 4½ pence for washing a shirt. "And," he adds pathetically, "shirts are changed every day in London. Such is the general custom, due no doubt to the griminess of the atmosphere." Still, on the whole, he found living less costly in London than in Paris. Beef was obtainable for 3½ pence and mutton for fivepence a pound. A quartern loaf was only sevenpence, and other food prices were on a similar scale.—London Chronicle.

Will Not Eat Flesh of Cat.

No carnivorous bird or quadruped in England will eat the flesh of a cat. The rule applies even to the carrion crow, which will devour dead dogs greedily.

Willie's Trouble.

Mrs. Murphy—"What is that the school doctor reported about your Willie?" Mrs. Ryan—"He said the child has them asteroids in his nose."

KING OF GREECE.

KING OF GREECE SHOWS SLIGHT IMPROVEMENT.

(King Constantine of Greece.)

Latest advices from Athens assert that the king is gaining slightly in his fight against pleurisy, which is said to have developed as a result of a wound inflicted by the queen in a heated discussion as to righteousness of Greece entering the war on the side of the Allies. The queen is a sister of the German Emperor. Should the king succumb, he will be succeeded by his eldest son, Crown Prince Georgios, who is twenty-five and bethrothed to the Princess Elizabeth of Roumania. The latter's mother is also a member of German royalty and is believed to be intensely pro-German in her attitude. The death of the present king will therefore place his son in an even more compromising predicament, for he must decide between the love of his mother and his fiancee and the will of his subjects, who are unanimous in their desire to take the side of the Allies.

A Useful Fly Poison

A USEFUL fly poison is prepared as follows: Two tablespoonfuls of formalin are mixed with a pint of equal parts of milk and water. This is poured into saucers and a piece of bread placed as an island in the center for flies to alight upon. The flies are attracted to the solution, poisoned, and the formalin possesses also disinfectant properties as it evaporates.

For the rapid destruction of flies within houses the most useful procedure is to burn pyrethrum powder (Persian insect powder). All doors and windows must be tightly closed, and after the powder is burned the flies must be swept from the floor and burned, as some may be stunned but not killed by the fumes.

Make Our Own Wrongs.

We make ourselves more injuries than are offered to us; they many times pass for wrongs in our own thoughts, that were never meant so by the heart of him that speaketh. The apprehension of wrong hurts more than the sharpest part of the wrong done.—Feltham.

The Cheapest Paper.

London used to possess the cheapest journal ever published. It was called the Six-a-Penny; or, Penny-a-Week Town and Country Daily Newspaper, and subscribers of 1 penny weekly had the paper delivered to them every day, while single copies were a farthing.

Unhappiness.

They who have never known prosperity can hardly be said to be unhappy. It is from the remembrance of joys we have lost that the arrows of affliction are pointed.—Emile Zola.

Dix—My wife's husband.—Boston Transcript.

AROUND THE DAIRY.

Any one who expects to keep ten or more cows should begin to make plans for building a silo this summer.

If you are selling cream or butter from four or more cows you should be using a cream separator.

In nearly every case a successful dairyman is a man who finds pleasure in handling and caring for cattle.

Do not feed milk in a tub or trough to calves. One calf will often drink twice as fast as another.

Nobody likes to walk about in mud and filth while caring for cattle. With a little work and a small expense the cow lot can be made a better place to go into.

FEEDING GRAIN TO COWS ON PASTURE

Changing cows from winter rations to grass is a radical change, writes H. G. Van Pelt in Kimball's Dairy Farmer. No radical change in feeding should be made suddenly. It will therefore be advisable to gradually accustom the cows to pasturage. In doing so the animal body is protected against abnormal stimulation and will retain throughout the season much of the stamina and energy stored up from expensive winter rations. Let the cows go to pasture two hours the first day, three hours the second day, four hours the third day, and thus change gradually from winter quarters to spring environment. In the same manner the winter ration should be decreased slowly and regularly, that the increase in milk flow which follows will be permanent rather than of a temporary character.

Grain should not be taken entirely away from cows that are producing largely. A certain amount of food nutrients are absolutely necessary for the manufacture of milk and butter fat. Knowing that pasture grass contains 80 per cent or more of water, it is not reasonable for the feeder to believe it possible for the cow to consume a large enough amount of green stuff to furnish nutrients for an exceptionally large flow of milk. It is true she will continue to yield largely on

Red Poll cows are not so large on the average as cows of some general purpose breeds, but that does not necessarily imply that they are less profitable. They are usually looked upon as economical producers. In England as well as in America they have made good records as milk producers and when fattened make fine beef carcasses. The illustration shows a Red Poll prize winning cow.

grass alone for a period of time, or so long as the green, succulent, palatable, easily digested grass stimulates her to do so at the expense of her body, but when finally she has robbed her framework of the residual effects of winter feeding then she will decline rapidly in her milk flow, never to return again until another freshening period.

One of the great secrets of encouraging large and persistent milk flow—and this is the profitable kind—is to protect and keep in perfect working order the animal body. Cows that have been properly fed during the winter go to pasture in excellent condition. The securing of this condition has been an expensive process extended over a period of six months or longer. Therefore it is a shortsighted policy, indeed, for the feeder to ignore the importance of conserving it as he does when he permits green, watery pasture grasses, by their stimulating character, to transfer this substantial condition to the milk pail in a temporarily enlarged flow.

Feed Cows Liberally.

Do not forget that the cow which is giving milk ought to have all the good feed she can consume. The more she can eat the more milk she will put in the pail if she is capable of producing milk. If she is not capable of converting her feed into milk then she will be putting on flesh and will be in better form to rear a good calf or will sell for more money when offered. If the cow is young she will grow as a result of liberal feeding and will be a better milk producer or if a stock cow will increase in value. There is every advantage in supplying an animal with all the feed it can clean up.—Kansas Farmer.

Dairying Worth While.

If dairying could be carried on in flowery beds of ease, if it were a picnic, a joke, an easy mark, one might see a reason for a thoughtful dairyman tolerating an unprofitable cow, but it is none of those light things. It requires real thought, attention, knowledge and work. Is it any different from anything else that is worth while?

Valuable Timber Tree.

One of the largest and most valuable timber trees of the country is the tulip tree, known to lumbermen as yellow poplar. It is related to the magnolias, but is the only tree of its kind in the world.

LAWS OF NEW YORK—By Authority.

CHAP. 183.

AN ACT to amend the benevolent orders law, in relation to the grand encampment of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the sovereign grand lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and the Order of Owls.

Became a law April 3, 1915, with the approval of the Governor. Passed, three-fifths being present.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. WANT "ADS" INSERTED AT THE SMALL COST OF CENT-A-WORD

Q.—"And on your way up stairs you told Dr. Ross you had been robbed of $220, didn't you?"
A.—"I don't recall it."
Q.—"Do you deny it?"
A.—"I don't recall it."

Denies Statements to Vanderveer.

When Vanderveer called Dr. Ross was with Van Aken up stairs. Van Aken said he came down when Vanderveer came and went to the door and it was then discovered that the money was missing. He returned up stairs and then he discovered that the jewelry of Mrs. Van Aken was missing.

Q.—"So you didn't discover any robbery up stairs until after Mr. Vanderveer came?"
A.—"I couldn't have."
Q.—"But you told Dr. Ross about the robbery of the desk and described the jewelry that was stolen when you went up stairs with him before Vanderveer came, didn't you?"
A.—"To the best of my knowledge I did not."
Q.—"Mr. Vanderveer was the second man to arrive there and when he arrived you didn't know that the jewelry had been stolen?"
A.—"I did not."
Q.—"So when he arrived you didn't open the door and say, 'Will, somebody has robbed my house and murdered my wife; I want you to help me?'"
A.—"I did not."

Discovered Jewelry Robbery in Others' Presence.

The pork chops were taken down stairs by Van Aken when he was down stairs and discovered the desk had been robbed.

Q.—"You made the search for the jewelry while they were in the room?"
A—"Not necessarily the search."

His wife's jewelry case stood on top of the bureau and he noticed it was missing.

Q—"Did you tell Dr. Ross of Mr. Vanderveer that besides the jewelry she had a considerable sum of money, including some church money, and you had searched for it and it was missing?"
A—"I certainly had not searched for it."
Q—"Did you at any time search for your wife's money?"
A—"Not that day."
Q—"But you did tell them you had searched?"
A—"I told them, yes. The money was in a purse which she kept in the bureau drawer and when I opened the drawer I couldn't find it."
Q—"Where were they when you searched?"
A—"They were in the room."

Recollection Bad Regarding Conversations.

Q—"When did you say you took took the pork chops down stairs?"
A—"While Dr. Ross and Mr. Vanderveer were upstairs."
Q—"Did you tell Mr. Doyle in the presence of Mr. Lounsbery that when you came in the house and discovered the body you telephoned to Dr Ross and then tok them down cellar before he came?"
"I certainly can't recall."
Q—"Did Mr. Doyle ask how the chops came to be in the cellar and you said you had found them and brought them down, too, with the steak?"
A—"I think I did."
Q—"Did Mr. Doyle ask you how you could telephone to him, to Vanderveer and to George Van Aken and be at the telephone when Dr. Ross arrived and yet take the meat down cellar after you had telephoned and did you say, 'I must have taken them down after Ross went away and before George came?"
A—"I don't recall."

On the day of the murder, he did not recall who asked him about the route he had taken to the ferry. He did recall saying he took the state road to the ferry; the ferry could not be reached except by the state road. Neither did he recall saying on the second day that he must have been mistaken after his attention was called to the fact that he traveled the back way though Green street.

Why He Examined the Desk.

When he left the house that morning, he locked his desk and placed the key on top.

Q—"What caused you to look in the desk after you came home?"
A—"When I found my wife dead upstairs, I thought something was wrong She had the privilege of going in it the same as I did. I found her dead and I decided to look there."
Q—"Did you tell Dr. Ross when he arrived that the desk was open on a crack and that was what called your attention to it?"
A—"Not at that time I didn't say that."

"Unfortunate Affair of My Wife Dying."

Q—"Do you know Chief of Police Wood?"
A—"I didn't know him until I met him at the time of the unfortunate affair of my wife dying."

He did not recall statements made to Chief Wood, and did not remember telling his sister-in-law, Mrs. Scott, that he had not changed his clothing that morning; he did change it.

When he went out that morning, the rear kitchen door was not locked; it was closed, and he did not recall telling Mr. Doyle and Mr. Dumond he had left it locked.

The key of the back door was produced by George Van Aken at Mr. Cunningham's request and introduced in evidence. It fits a Yale lock. He knew of no one else who had a key to fit that lock.

Q.—"Were you going to use this steak for dinner?"
A.—"No."
Q.—"Did you tell Dr. Ross you went to Rondout to get meat for dinner?"
A.—"Not in that language."
Q.—"But in substance?"
A.—"Not in substance."

When he returned, the back door was closed but not locked.

The Bank Book Comes in Case Again.

Q.—"On Wednesday night of the week before her death, did your wife bring you a bank book wrapped in a towel and was she crying?"
A.—"No."
Q.—"Was it on the Wednesday night of the week she died that it happened?"
A.—"No."
Q.—"Did she at any time bring you the bank book produced yesterday wrapped in a towel and was she crying?"
A.—"No."
Q.—"Did you tell Mrs. Scott when she brought you two bank books that that had found that your wife had brought you the third bank book wrapped in a towel and that she was crying?"
A.—"No, because I had the bank book in my possession."

Owed Jacob Furmansky $600 On Note.

Asked about withdrawing $600 from the Rondout Savings Bank, he was asked:

Q.—"That was to pay a note held by Jacob Furmansky?"
A.—"I never said so."
Q.—"Did you use it for that?"
A.—"No."
Q.—"Did you owe Jacob Furmansky $600 on a note?"
A.—"I did."
Q.—"On the back or front of that note was the name of your wife, Carrie B. Van Aken?"
A.—"It was."

But Does Not Remember Details.

Q.—"And you paid that note in the neighborhood of a month before it came due?"
A.—"I can't recall the details. I don't recall the amount."

Denies Wife's Name Was Forgery.

Q.—"Before withdrawing this $600, did you have a conversation with Furmansky?"
A.—"I don't recall."
Q.—"Didn't he tell you he demanded immediate payment because the signature of your wife was a forgery?"
A.—"In loudest tone yet used by the witness).—"No."

Paid Note Before it Was Due.

Q.—"Why did you pay the note before it was due?"
A.—"Because I had the money to pay it."
Q.—"Where was that money?"
A.—"In my possession."
Q.—"Where?"
A.—"On my person."

$1,000 in Possession on Day of Murder.

Q.—"When did you have the money in your possession or on your person?"
A.—"I had part of it on my person on October 22."
Q.—"The day your wife died?"
A.—"Yes."
Q.—"How much of it was on your person then?"
A.—"A couple of hundred dollars."
Q.—"That morning?"
A.—"Yes."
Q.—"Then why did you go to the post office to get change for Chester Thorpe's $20 bill?"
A.—"It was in bills of large denominations."
Q.—"Why did you withdraw $600 from the bank?"

Objected to by Mr. Brinnier on the ground that a man has a right to draw his own money from the bank for personal expenses. Overruled.

A.—"To pay Formansky and to pay my living expenses."
Q.—"So on that day that your wife died you had $200 in your desk, $200 on your person and had drawn $600, making $1,00 in all. Is that correct?"
A.—"It is."
Q.—"When you drew the $600, did your wife ask you not to do it?"
A.—"No."
Q.—"Did you have a talk with her about it?"
A.—"No."
Q.—"Did she cry?"
A.—"She did not."

Knew She Kept Money in Stockings.

Q.—"You don't knew where she kept her $88?"
A.—"No."
Q.—"She didn't tell you?"
A.—"No. I knew nearly all the time.
Q.—"She didn't tell you she had $150 in a bag?"
A.—"No."
Q.—"You didn't know about that until Mrs. Hommel found it?"
A.—"I knew she had money, but not the location."
Q.—"Did you know she carried money in her stockings?"
A.—"I knew it, yes, but not in large amounts."
Q.—"When you returned home, you saw her stockings had been unfastened and were down below her knees?"
A.—"I didn't know anything about; I didn't handle the body."

Denies Calling Her Vile Names.

Van Aken did remember that about two weeks before the murder his wife and Mrs. Houghtaling went shopping, returning home at 6 o'clock and that he answered their door bell ring, but he denied that his wife said she had been locked out before but not be again, and that thereupon he called her a vile name and continued to call her such names.

BRYAN TELLS WHY HE RESIGNED

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, June 9.—William J. Bryan today declared that the disagreement with President Wilson over the application of the principle of the Bryan peace treaties to the demand of the U. S. that Germany cease submarine warfare upon merchantmen was one of two reasons why he resigned from the cabinet. The second reason was their disagreement over Mr. Bryan's suggestion that Americans be warned against traveling on belligerent vessels or with cargoes of ammunition.

Mr. Bryan's statement was given out at the moment the note to Germany was put on the cables this afternoon.

The Last Forever Roof.

A car load of asbestos century shingles has just been unloaded at the warehouse of Walter S. Darling, the mason material man, on Washington avenue, this city. These shingles have become very popular for roofing buildings with pitched roofs and they possess many advantages over other roofings that have been used heretofore. They are fireproof, need no paint or repairs and will last as long as the building on which they are applied. They are made in a variety of designs and colors and are adapted to any style of architecture. They cost no more than one would expect to pay for a permanent roof and always hold their color and attactiveness. Call on Mr. Darling or write him for prices, samples or any other information. He is prepared to supply dealers as well as consumers at the right price.—Advertisement.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 9.—The tone of the stock market at the opening this morning was feverish and unsettled, but there was a broad demand with buyers eager to obtain all issues offered at more than usual concessions. The general assumption just before the start was that many speculative holdings would be thrown on the market as a matter of safety. Because of this bids at the outset were materially under yesterday's close and selling orders were necessarily at that bid range. After the first sales however, it became evident that the supply of stocks was far less than had been expected, and when this situation was comprehended the inquiry became brisk and recoveries and advances were quickly in order. Bethlehem Steel which closed yesterday at 159⅜ dropped to 156 and then moved to 159½. There was a wide opening in U. S. Steel common initial sales being recorded as 7,500 shares at 57 to 57¾, against 58¾ at the close yesterday, but inside of a few minutes the stock was up to 59¼. General Motors broke four points to 146, and also quickly recovered the loss. American Smelting fell ⅞ to 74½ and then rose to 75½. Union Pacific opened ⅞ lower at 125⅝ and rallied to above 126. Studebaker receded 4¾ at the opening to 70 an was quickly up to 73½. Canadian Pacific was exceptionally strong, rising ¾ to 151¼. 8Missouri Pacific gained ¾ to 12¼. Tennessee Copper also showed strength, advancing 1⅜ to 37½.

2:30 p. m.—The tone was heavy in the first half of the last hour with a show of absolute weakness in some quarters where stocks were liberally supplied. Steel declined to 57.

The stock market closed feverish and unsettled, governments unchanged, other bonds irregular.

Defining a Batman.

What is a batman? The term seems to be a military one. It apparently means the driver or manager of pack horses. A bat horse is a pack horse which carries officers' luggage. "Bat" is a pack saddle and, like so many military words, it is French. There is a common French proverb, "C'est la que le bat le blesse"—"That is where the saddle hurts," or, as we say, "where the shoe pinches."—Manchester Guardian.

CHAP. 247.

AN ACT to amend the religious corporations law, in relation to qualifications of voters at annual elections and special meetings of incorporated Protestant Episcopal parishes.

Became a law April 9, 1915, with the approval of the Governor. Passed, three-fifths being present.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. Section forty-three of chapter fifty-three of the laws of nineteen hundred and nine, entitled "An act in relation to religious corporations, constituting chapter fifty-one of the consolidated laws," is hereby amended to read as follows:

§ 43. Annual elections and special meetings of incorporated Protestant Episcopal parishes. The annual election of a Protestant Episcopal parish, hereafter incorporated, shall be held on the secular day in the week commencing with the first Sunday in Advent, designated in its certificate of incorporation. The annual election of an incorporated Protestant Episcopal parish or church heretofore incorporated shall be held on the day fixed for such annual election, by or in pursuance of law, or if no such date be so fixed, then on the Monday next after the first Sunday in Advent. Special meetings of any Protestant Episcopal parish or church heretofore or hereafter incorporated may be held on any secular day fixed by the vestry. Notice of such annual election or special meeting shall be read by the rector of the parish, or if there be none, or he be absent, by the officiating minister or by a church warden thereof, on each of the two Sundays next preceding such election or special meeting, in the time of divine service, or if, for any reason, the usual place of worship of the parish be not open for divine service, the notice shall be posted conspicuously on the outer door of the place of worship for two weeks next preceding the election or special meeting. Such notice shall specify the place, day and hour of holding the election or special meeting. The notice of the annual election shall also specify the name and term of office of each church warden and vestryman whose term of office shall then expire, or whose office shall then be vacant for any cause, and the office for which each such officer is to be then elected. The notice of a special meeting shall specify the matter or question to be brought before such meeting and no matter or question not specified in such notice shall be acted on at such meeting. The presiding officer of such annual or special meeting shall be the rector of the parish, if there be one, or if there be none, or he be absent, one of the church wardens elected for the purpose by a majority of the duly qualified voters present, or if no church warden be present, a vestryman elected in like manner. Such presiding officer shall be the judge of the qualifications of the voters; shall receive the votes cast; and shall declare the result of the votes cast. The presiding officer of such annual or special meeting shall enter the proceedings of the meeting in the book of the minutes of the vestry, sign his name thereto, and offer the same to as many qualified voters present as he shall think fit, to be also signed by them. Male persons of full age belonging to the parish, who have been regular atendants at its worship and contributors to its support for at least twelve months prior to such election or special meeting or since the establishment of such parish, shall be qualified voters at any such election or special meeting, and also, whenever so permitted by the canons of the diocese, women having the like qualifications may vote at the annual elections and special meetings of any parish of such diocese, whenever such parish shall so determine in the manner provided in section forty-six of this chapter. The action of an annual or special meeting upon any matter or question shall be decided by a majority of the qualified voters voting thereon. The polls of an election shall continue open for one hour and longer, in the discretion of the presiding officer, or if required by a vote of a majority of the qualified voters present and voting. The church wardens and vestrymen shall be elected by ballot from male persons qualified to vote at such election, and no person shall be eligible for election as church warden, unless he be also a communicant in the Protestant Episcopal church, nor be eligible for election as vestryman, unless he shall have been baptized. At each annual election of an incorporated Protestant Episcopal parish hereafter incorporated, one church warden shall be elected to hold office for two years; and one-third of the total number of vestrymen of the parish shall be elected to hold office for three years. At each annual election of an incorporated Protestant Episcopal parish or church heretofore incorporated, two church wardens and the total number of its vestrymen shall be elected to hold office for one year thereafter, unless the term of office of but one church warden or of but one-third of its vestrymen shall then expire, in which case one church warden shall be elected to hold office for two years, and one-third of the total number of its vestrymen shall be elected to hold office for three years. Each church warden and vestryman shall hold office after the expiration of his term until his successor shall be chosen.

§ 2. This act shall take effect immediately.

State of New York, Office of the Secretary of State, ss.:

I have compared the preceding with the original law on file in this office, and do hereby certify that the same is a correct transcript therefrom and of the whole of said original law.

CONVICT BUILT STATE ROADS

Highways Are Improved and the Men Benefited.

GOOD OBJECTS ATTAINED.

Road Work For Prisoners Is Successful Both From a Humanitarian and From an Economic Standpoint—No Guards Are Used in Colorado, but Few Convicts Have Tried to Escape.

At the fourth American road congress at Atlanta last November there was a too brief discussion of the employment of convicts on public roads. But since the participants gave actual experience rather than untried theories we may overlook the lack of some details, says the National Stockman and Farmer.

Two objects are in view in the working of convicts on roads—the welfare of the men and the improvement of the highways. Experience shows that both objects are attained, but that road work is a greater success from the humanitarian than from the economic standpoint.

The effect on the prisoners is good both physically and morally. Their work is wholesome, in the open air. They are taught to work and are rewarded for faithfulness by a small sum of money which is available when their sentence expires or by a reduction of their term of imprisonment. They are trained in cleanliness and sanitation, and, above all, they are made to feel that they are men by being trusted.

Commissioner Maloney of Colorado states that no armed guards are used, the men are placed on parole and trusted, and not over one in 100 has ever attempted to escape. Commissioner Coleman of Virginia has not been able to put the honor system into effect with the convicts under his control, but evidently has hope of being able to do so with certain classes.

It is worthy of note that the effect of road work is good on the mind of the public as well as on the morals of the prisoner. The average citizen is "able to see for himself that very few of the convicts are dangerous and that many of them, if given a chance, will make good citizens." It has also "quickened the demand for better roads."

Many prisoners are employed by contractors or farmers at the expiration of their term and thus kept away from their old haunts and associates. In a word, there is no question about the moral, mental and physical benefits of road work on the convicts and incidentally a better attitude toward them on the part of the public.

Absolutely correct analysis of the economic side of the movement is impossible from the data presented. Commissioner Coleman states that it cost last year 51 cents per ten hour day to feed, guard and otherwise provide for the convict labor on roads.

It would cost something to provide for these men in idleness, and the total should not be charged to the roads. In Colorado experience shows a saving of about 25 per cent over free labor, all things considered. Mr. Atkinson of Louisiana estimates the total cost of prisoners on roads, including supervision, at 41 cents per day.

Mr. Morgan of Utah made no estimates except a saving of $1,500 to $2,000 a mile on roads built with convict labor. Such experience given by men in charge of the prisoners and the roads is worth a volume of theories about a great problem, but it also sustains the theory that convicts should build roads.

If This is Your Birthday

JUNE 9

The person of this birthdate has a sensitive, generous and kind nature and this generosity may become a fault as he will be unwilling to believe anything wrong of his friends, who often impose upon his credulity.

When awakened to his higher powers, this person may achieve success along any artistic line for which he is peculiarly fitted.

People of this birthdate are extremists always. If they are religious they are over-zealous and if talented in art or music neglect all other pursuits and are sometimes very eccentric.

Tagore's Fame in India.

As showing something of Rubindranath Tagore's fame in his native India, Ernest Rhys tells the following story in his biography of Tagore:

"Mr. Montague, the undersecretary of state for India, was on one occasion riding through an Indian forest at night when he came upon a clearing where two or three men sat around the fire. Not being certain of the road," says Mr. Rhys, "he was glad to dismount and rest his tired horse. Shortly after he had joined the group a poor looking, ill clothed lad came out of the forest and sat down also at the fire. First one of the men sang a song and then another. The boy's turn came, and he sang a song more beautiful both in words and music than the rest. When asked who had made the song he said that he did not know, 'they were singing these songs everywhere.' Awhile after Mr. Montague heard the words that he had used again, this time in a very different place, and when he asked for the name of the maker of the song he heard for the first time the name of Rabindranath Tagore."

Care of the Mouth.

The use of a tooth wash does not approach the conditions of a laboratory test, though there can be little doubt that a good deal of germicidal work in the mouth is done by the vigorous application of the toothbrush, and it may be pointed out that the tongue may well be included in the process. To be effective, however, the action of all antiseptics takes time, according to the vitality of the organisms they encounter, and usually the tooth brushing process does not occupy many seconds. This question of time exposure is important, but it is very generally overlooked and consequently the antiseptic treatment of the teeth falls short of that effectiveness which is shown to be the case in laboratory experiments. The tooth washing process should be more prolonged and the antiseptic wash allowed to remain in contact with the teeth and gums for some minutes instead of seconds before finally washing the mouth clear of antiseptic with plain water.—London Lancet.

His Yallerweed.

Many persons are under the impression that America has few, if any, native plants worthy of cultivation in the home garden. They have been accustomed to look upon them as weeds and wild things, and so unfamiliar are they with native flowers that they fail to recognize them when they meet them outside their native haunts. A writer tells how he transplanted a stalk of goldenrod from a fence corner in the pasture to a place in his garden. It flourished luxuriantly and sent up many stalks as high as a man's head, each crowned with a great plume of brilliant flowers. A neighbor was attracted by the beauty of the plant and declared it must have cost its owner some dollars. When told, however, that numbers of the same plant were flourishing behind his barn he exclaimed: "What! You mean to tell me it's yallerweed!" And he went away with the air of one who had been imposed upon.—Country Gentleman.

Thievery In Chile.

The Chilean masses have a bad name for larceny. In Chilean ports ship passengers are warned to lock their cabin doors, and loaded lighters have to be guarded at night. Chilean stokers will saw through the bulkhead into the vessel's hold, steal goods and hide them in the coal bunkers till the night after they arrive in port, when they find opportunity to lower them overside to a confederate in a boat under cover of darkness. Harbor thieves will even cut a hole in the bow of a vessel and make off with boatloads of freight. The Germans of southern Chile have the worst opinion of Chilean honesty, and in Santiago I was bidden notice the high walls and grated windows of the houses of the better class. —Professor Edward Alsworth Ross in "South of Panama."

Care of the Baby In Summer

Bottle Feeding.

[Prepared by the children's bureau, United States department of labor.]

The first and most important thing to do for a baby is to find the right food for him. When for any reason he is deprived of the one "right" food, his mother's milk, some substitute must be found. Experience in feeding many thousands of babies in this and other countries has shown that clean, fresh cow's milk is the only food that can be depended upon to take the place of breast milk with even a fair degree of success.

In order to have milk that is clean enough for a baby's food, the greatest care must be taken to keep it clean from the time it is drawn from the cow until it goes into the baby's mouth. If a cow is kept on the place it should be possible for the mother to see that the cow is brushed clean before being milked, that the teats and udder are washed before the milking begins, that the hands and clothing of the milker are clean and that a partly covered milk pail is used, which has been scalded with boiling water before use.

It is sometimes advisable to boil the milk, especially in hot summer weather. Usually the method of treatment called pasteurization renders it safe. Here is a simple method of pasteurizing:

Put a gallon of water over the fire in a large kettle. When the water is boiling hard remove the kettle and let it stand uncovered for ten minutes. Stand the filled and corked bottles in the hot water, cover the kettle and allow it to stand for half an hour. Remove the bottles and cool them, under running water if possible, until they are cold, and keep them on ice or where they will be cold until needed.

Perfect cleanliness must be observed in making up the baby's feedings. The mother's hands should be washed clean, and she should wear a clean apron. All the dishes and articles to be used should have been boiled before being used, and as far as possible they should be kept for the baby's use alone. Milk is very readily tainted by being put into dishes in which food has been cooked. If convenient have on hand a kettle large enough to hold eight nursing bottles at a time, a two quart bowl or pitcher to hold the milk mixture, a funnel through which to pour it into the bottles, a long handled spoon to stir it with, a bottle brush, enough nursing bottles and nipples for all the nursings in twenty-four hours, and the same number of new corks. A graduated measuring glass is a convenience, but a nursing bottle having a scale in ounces blown in one side may be used instead.

It is most important that the bottles shall be kept cold from the time the milk is prepared until it is used. Here is a cheap and effective icebox:

Use a lard or candy bucket or a wooden box for the outside receptacle. In the bottom put a layer of sawdust an inch thick. In the middle of this box place an eight quart tin pail with a cover and fill all the space around it with sawdust. Inside this pail put the ice and the bottles and cover both the inner pail and the outer box. If the ice is broken up and put into a small covered pail which is set inside the refrigerator it will keep longer than when it is not thus protected. If the outer box has a cover on hinges, as will be most convenient, a thick layer of newspapers may be tacked to the underside of the cover. Or a cushion stuffed with hay, straw, excelsior or sawdust, made to fit the cover of the box, may be fastened to it. If properly made this little device will keep the baby's bottles sweet for twenty-four hours with very little ice, provided they are very cold when put in.

When it is time to feed the baby take one of the bottles out of the icebox and put it in a small pail or pan of water over the fire to heat. The water should come up to the milk line on the bottle. Do not make the milk too hot. The mother may test the heat by sprinkling a few drops on the inner surface of her arm; when it feels just comfortably warm to her skin it will be right for the baby.

After the feeding is finished, remove the bottle at once and empty out any milk that may be left. Rinse it with cool water and leave it filled with water. At some convenient time wash the bottles with warm soap and water using the bottle brush to scrub them clean inside. Rinse thoroughly and put them over the fire to boil. The kettle used for pasteurizing may be used for this purpose. The water should cover the bottles and they should be boiled for fifteen minutes. They may stay in the water until the feedings are made up. Wash and boil the corks at the same time.

To clean the nipples, wash and scrub them in warm soapy water. A little common salt rubbed on the inside will remove the milk. Rinse well and drop them into boiling water for five minutes. They will dry with their own heat when removed and should be put away dry, in a dry glass jar, which has been boiled with the bottles. Cover the jar and keep it out of the light. Handle the nipples only by the lower edge, and never by the top, which is to go into the baby's mouth, and guard especially against flies, which like nothing better than to swarm over the baby's bottle and nipple. If this happens, put on a fresh nipple before feeding the baby. Flies are a deadly enemy to humanity.

WEDDING WARE FOR THE JUNE BRIDE

Silverware, which is becoming more and more the most popular wedding gift, must have a standard of merit to be appreciated by the bride. If it is Gorham's you know and she knows that it is genuine. Gifts of silver and gold have the intrinsic value and permanence of a precious stone and should not be nondescript in origin.

Our stock is large and varied, and our prices are as low as those of the Gorham Company.

REV. JOHN J. HICKEY.

PARISH HONORS LOVED RECTOR

St. Mary's school hall was crowded on Tuesday evening when the members of the congregation gathered to do honor to their rector, the Rev. John J. Hickey, who celebrated the twentieth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. In the afternoon the children of the parish gave expression of the love for the rector with an entertainment in the hall.

Father Connelly presided at the meeting in the evening and made a short address. He was followed by Father Gilmartin, who spoke of the great work accomplished by Father Hickey during his pastorate here. Former Alderman William Roach read a set of resolutions adopted by the members of the congregation.

The next speaker was the Rev. Father Reilly of Yonkers, a classmate of Father Hickey, who spoke at some length. Then on behalf of the members of the congregation and friends the Hon. Andrew J. Cook presented Father Hickey with a substantial purse. Among the other speakers were the Rev. Francis Cummings of East Kingston and the Rev. Michael Larkin of New York. The Rev. Michael Toner, the Rev. Father Lienweseki and the Rev. Father Brown were also present.

During the evening several selections were rendered by the choir under the direction of Prof. Rieser and dancing followed until 1 o'clock this morning. During the evening the rector was warmly congratulated by his friends and members of the congregation for his long service to the church.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, June 9.—The fight fans will awaken to the fact some day that they are the "goats" in the no-decision bouts that are being staged here, there and everywhere in this land of no-decision bouts.

Paying real money to see a no-decision bout is about the same thing as paying to see a three inning baseball game. The affair hardly has begun before it's over. And there rarely is a definite result. The fan likes to see boxing—but he'd rather see a knockout. That's the hope he cherishes every time he takes a ringside seat unto himself.

But knockouts in no-decision bouts are about as rare as peaceful nations in Europe. The fighters get the coin, knockout or no knockout. So why take chance?

Freddie Welsh has done more to show the American public on the no-decision bouts than any other fighter. Welsh has a wonderful defense and has shown repeatedly that he can protect his jaw for 10 or 12 rounds. Welsh has drawn down about $50,000 in this country for the no-decision bouts he has mingled in, and in not one of them has he really given to patrons their money's worth.

Welsh has fought on the defensive—and fought cautiously. As a result, all his bouts have been tame, uninteresting and revolting to the bulk of the fans who have seen him in action.

Welsh is billed to meet Charley White in a 20 round bout on July 5 in Denver. Decisions are permitted there. Welsh may really meet White—and he may not. He may discover that he has a bad case of indigestion, wounded hand or something on that order to cause him to indefinitely postpone the meeting.

But even if the White-Welsh fight is staged it doesn't promise to be anything but an uninteresting hugging match. Welsh can use one hand and outbox White. The Chicagoan's only chance for victory is via the knockout route and Welsh probably can stall off the haymaker for 20 rounds.

Willie Ritchie has been yearning for a battle with Welsh over the 20 round route but Welsh has avoided the American champion. The reason is plain. Welsh, knowing that he has ceased to be a no-decision drawing card, has decided to engage in a 20 round affair. And he picked White in preference to Ritchie because all that White has is a punch which sometimes lands—and oftener doesn't.

With an American referee on the job it's a 2 to one shot that Ritchie would outpoint Welsh in 20 rounds—or in 10 rounds Ritchie is not the master boxer that Welsh is but he's far more aggressive, and it's aggressiveness that counts. On the other side of the Atlantic it's the other way. The points go to the defensive man. That's what Welsh is and that's why he got the decision—and the world championship—from Ritchie on July 7, 1914 in London.

White is aggressive but he hasn't any defense and Welsh will wallop him five times where he'd wallop Ritchie only once. In meeting White the Briton risks nothing but a possible knockout punch. So why not risk it especially in view of the fact that he will get $13,000 or $15,000?

The purse conditions of the proposed White-Welsh fight are peculiar. They probably establish a precedent because Welsh will get more by losing that he would by winning.

If Welsh wins he gets $13,000. If he loses he gets $15,000. Of this total the matchmakers loosen up to the extent of $13,000 and White's backers "come through" with the extra $2,000. They feel they can afford it in the event of a White victory. And they can.
